Boy is Killed

In New York last week, Harry W. Ayers, 16 years old, was shot and killed by another boy in front of the Star Theatre on the crowded upper East Side, with hundreds of persons passing by. The boy who did the shooting made his escape. The police said the killing was the aftermath of a baseball game which hades up in a fight was the aftermath of a baseball game which broke up in a fight.

Ayres was seated with a companion, Miles Sweeney, on a barrel in front of the theatre when another boy, slightly older, walked up to him and asked:

"Are you Harry Ayres?" Young Ayres answered that he was, whereupon the older boy pulled out a revolver and shot Ayres through the chest. The assailant saw the gathering crowd, picked up some pieces of old iron and fought a retreat to Park avenue, where he disappeared under the railroad viaduct.
