In Memoriam. J. D. Noble, Died. April 3rd 1899.

It seems so hard life's close should be In days of blooming manhood's prime, When friends are hoping jayously Of the success of future time.

It seems so sad, a friend how dear— Esteemed by all who knew his worth, Whose life was blessed to many here, We now, no more, shall meet on earth,

O! 'tis not sad, O! 'tis not hard. God's ways are loving, just, and true, His plan and purpose ne'er are marred Though oft times false is mortal's view

The spirit now has winged its flight To higher, brighter, holier sphere He liveth in eternal light, No happiness, like his, is here.

This life is only a sojourn Whence we shall in brief space remove

Let us not murmur, while we mourn Our wills be Thine O! God of love.
