FUNERAL OF SOLDIER'S DAUGHTER.

The funeral of the late Olive Hodgson, eldest daughter of Sgt. John Hodgson, formerly of the 26th Battalion, but now of the Depot unit at Sussex, was held yesterday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock from the residence of her parents, Duke street. Rev. A. N. Marchant conducted the funeral services, which were largely attended.

The floral tributes were numerous and costly, which testified to the esteem in which the late young lady was held by her numerous friends. The sympathy of all got out to the sorrowing family in their bereavement.

MEMORIAL SERVICE IN HONOR OF ST. JOHN'S HERO NURSE

Tablet To Memory of Nursing Sister Anna Stammers Unveiled Last Night At Central Church—Many Floral Tributes From Friends.

Simple but touching, in keeping with the character of the young lady in whose honor it was held, was the memorial service conducted last evening in Central Baptist church in memory of Nursing Sister Anna Stammers, a victim of Hun piracy, who went to her death on June 27, 1918, when the hospital ship Llandovery Castle was sent to the bottom by a German submarine. A beautiful photographic memorial bearing the following inscription was unveiled by her cousin, Master George Stammers:

In loving memory of NURSING SISTER ANNA STAMMERS, Born January 15, 1888, While serving God, the Nation and Humanity she came to her death in the sinking of the Llandovery Castle by a German Submarine on June 27, 1918. "She hath done what she could."

The programme of the service was as follows:—Singing of "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" by a quartette; Scripture reading and prayer by Rev. D. J. MacPherson; solo, "O Rest in the Lord"; address by the pastor; unveiling of the memorial; placing of the floral tributes at the foot of the memorial; singing of "For Ever With the Lord" by the choir; and the benediction by the pastor.

Before pronouncing the benediction Rev. D. J. MacPherson announced that the friends of the deceased at Renforth had decided to place a tablet to the memory of Miss Stammers in the General Public Hospital, instead of placing a floral tribute at the present service.

After the benediction the large audience took the opportunity to take a close look at the memorial picture. In his address Rev. Mr. MacPherson said: "From the very outbreak of the war Germany's actions have evoked the condemnation of the world. The sinking of the Lusitania is only an incident in a long succession of horrors. The torpedoing of the hospital ship Llandovery Castle comes to us as a reminder in a long list of atrocious ruthlessness."

He then referred to what had been done in Belgium, Poland and Serbia, both in the way of destruction of property and the outraging of humanity. In speaking of the sinking of the hospital ship he said:—"But the unbelievable has come. In the sinking of the Llandovery Castle the astounding brutality of the Hun is an incredible revelation. Sir Edward Kemp, minister of overseas military forces of Canada, having completed his enquiry into the circumstances, states that the documents established the blackest features of that crime as represented in the earlier reports. These documents comprising depositions by the earlier observers among the survivors show first, that the crime was deliberately conceived; second, that it was unparalleled for calculated savagery; third, ferocious efforts were made to obliterate all traces of the deed; fourth, that the only surviving life boat with its twenty-four occupants escaped almost by a hairbreadth; fifth, that the list of survivors included only one officer and five of other ranks of the hospital personnel of the ninety-eight; sixth, that all ranks, especially the fourteen Canadian sisters who were lost, conducted themselves in the midst of events and incidents of the most terrifying character, with a discipline impossible to excel; seventh, that the nurses who were lost had served months, and some of them years, in the danger zone in France, again and again nursing German wounded; eighth, that these nurses not only had given water and medical aid to parched and bleeding enemy soldiers, but had written down many times statements by dying enemy officers and men and transmitted these through the Red Cross."

Speaking more directly of Miss Stammers he said:—"Sister Anna I. Stammers was an honored member of this church. Her sunny disposition, beautiful and cheerful expression, with a keen, clear intellect eminently fitted her for the noble profession which she had chosen. She graduated from the General Canada Hospital of this city in 1912. In 1915 she felt it her duty to serve her country, and on offering for overseas was accepted. She spent a year and a half in France ministering as an angel of mercy to the sick, wounded and dying soldiers. Her devotion in this glorious service finds expression in the words of a convalescent soldier: "She is like one's true sister and has a heart as big as all out doors." Particularly fitted for service as she felt it her duty to offer for the more dangerous task, and labored nobly until she met her death on June 27, 1918. "Truly she can be said of her: 'She hath done what she could.'"

Following is the list of floral tributes: Large red cross of geraniums "In Memoriam," from the St. John branch of the Red Cross Society of Canada. Large spray of red and cream roses "In Memoriam" on official card, from the Navy League of Canada, B. division. Spray tied with navy blue ribbon and bearing the insignia of the league in badge form. Red cross of geraniums from the Esmouth street troop Boy Scouts of Canada. Inscription on printed card, "With admiration and respect for a brave St. John girl." This tribute was placed at the foot of the memorial by Master Eric Golding, a scout. Bunch of carnations, bearing a card, "From friends in the Knights of Pythias." The late B. A. Stammers, father of the nurse whose memory was thus honored, was a prominent member of Union Lodge No. 2, K. of P.

Bouquet of cut flowers from the Nurses' Alumnae of the General Public Hospital, states that the documents established the blackest features of that crime as represented in the earlier reports. These documents comprising depositions by the earlier observers among the survivors show first, that the crime was deliberately conceived; second, that it was unparalleled for calculated savagery; third, ferocious efforts were made to obliterate all traces of the deed; fourth, that the only surviving life boat with its twenty-four occupants escaped almost by a hairbreadth; fifth, that the list of survivors included only one officer and five of other ranks of the hospital personnel of the ninety-eight; sixth, that all ranks, same room with Babineau says that late that night some one came into the room gathered up something and went out. He did not see who it was, but as he felt sure it was Babineau he did not strike a light or get up to investigate. In the morning he noticed that Babineau's clothes and belongings were gone and concluded he had quietly slipped out.

"AUTO OWNERS ATTENTION" It has been ordered by the committee of Public Safety of St. John, appointed by the Privy Council of Canada, that all automobile owners, immediately darken the upper-half of their headlights from this date (for the duration of the war). The committee points out that owners may either paint the upper half of their lenses or darken them by pasting brown paper with the upper half of the inside of their lenses.

W. E. MCGONAGLE WILL LOCATE IN GRAND FALLS

Popular Member of The Standard's Writing Staff Goes To Victoria, County To Practise Law.

William E. McGonagle, a graduate in law of King's University, and for more than two years a valued member of The Standard's writing staff, leaves this morning for Grand Falls, where he will engage in the practice of his chosen profession. Mr. McGonagle, who is a native of Windsor, was articled with A. A. Dyart of Bonaventure, and while attending the law school in St. John was associated with E. J. Hennegarty. Energetic and tireless worker he also engaged in several other commercial ventures all of which proved successful. His career at the law school was an exceptionally creditable one as he led or finished second in every subject in the school curriculum. As a student representative he was capable and industrious, a ready writer and an indefatigable news gatherer. Early in the war he offered himself for military service but was found to be physically unfit. Recently he journeyed to Halifax with the intention of joining the navy, but was again rejected.

A good speaker, a ready debater, of affable disposition and a good fellow, Mr. McGonagle starts the practice of law with every promise of success. His many friends will miss him, but they will be pleased more generally than by members of The Standard staff.

CAMP GALAHAD GOING STRONG

Successful Season For Organization Under Direction of St. David's Presbyterian Church.

Camp Galahad, under the direction of St. David's church, although over for this season, is still "going strong" in the minds of those who attended it. With the coming of the second week the weather made a slight change for the better. "Old Sol" has, of late, been in the habit of coming out long enough to be seen by the campers and then going back, but the boys said "every little helps."

The camp was directed by the "camp council," which was composed of the camp officers, the tent captains and the tent lieutenants. The camp officers were: Chief A. H. Crookshank; chaplain, Rev. J. A. MacKellan; steward, F. J. Punter; sports director, K. M. Willet.

The tent leaders were:—Tent No. 1, Capt. Andrew Malcolm, Lieut. Gordon Wilson; tent No. 2, Capt. Ronald Shaw, Lieut. Erroll Soberton; camp No. 2, Capt. Kenneth G. Lewis, Lieut. George Campbell; camp No. 4, Capt. Leslie Kerr, Lieut. Roland Rockwell. The work of the camp was divided as follows:

Each day one tent was on table duty, one on safety duty, one on wood duty, and one on programme duty. The tent on table duty had to assist the steward in preparing the meals, while the tent on wood duty had to get wood for the next day. It was so arranged that the tent which got wood and built the camp fire one day was on table duty the next and burned their own wood, so it did not pay to get more wood. The tent on safety duty had to see that the boys were hauled up above the high-water mark, that all garbage and other debris likely to breed flies were either burned or buried, and that the boats were kept bailed out. The tent on programme duty had to prepare a programme for the evening camp fire.

Points were given for the manner in which the duties were carried out and for the neatness of the tent. A pennant was awarded each day to the tent which had the highest number of points. The pennant is a red, double-pointed flag, bearing in white the inscription "Camp Galahad, 1918." This year tent No. 4 tallied up the largest number of points, so its captain, Leslie Kerr, is now the proud possessor of the pennant.

The chief sports were swimming, diving, rowing, baseball and all kinds of jumping, and ball throwing. A series of field sports was run off on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, points being given to the winning teams. At the eleven o'clock swimming sessions were held in the swimming pool, and in methods of reviving a drowning man.

Two evening papers were run at the camp; the official paper, the "Roundtable" was edited by Douglas Jamieson, while the opposing one, the "Truthful News" was edited by Ronald Shaw.

The camp fire on Friday night, the last night in camp, was a very large one, and the entertainment put on by the campers was a most successful one, consisting of a sing-song, recitations and a solo. Speeches were then called for from the camp and tent leaders, and all acquitted themselves very well indeed. On Saturday morning the boys broke up camp and returned to the city by the steamer D. J. Fardy, arriving late Saturday afternoon.
