Valise stolen. A clergyman arrived by the Intercolonial train last evening, and in company with a friend walked from the station, but gave his valise to a coachman, Mr. George W. Stockford. The coachman drove to the Ferry landing, and went over to Carlton to see his brother, who was going away by train, leaving the valise in his coach, which was standing at the Ferry landing. While he was absent, some one appropriated to himself the valise, and nothing has been heard of it since. His whip which was on the outside of the coach was put inside, and the valise was taken out. The valise contained about $100 in cash and some valuable papers. It was a piece of gross carelessness on the part of the coachman to leave his coach with property left in his charge, and even go down to the boat, and if it is not found, he should certainly be held responsible for the loss.
