

command post was organized at the Hartland Town Hall with Majors Bill Molnar and Bob Mahar and Insp. Zinck in charge of the "friendly forces."

The "enemy", the BPPLA terrorists, were represented by Major "Ike" Kennedy and thirty-nine other members of the Canadian Airborne Regiment's Second Commando, based at CFB Petawawa, Ontario. The BPPLA had already infiltrated the community and hidden themselves, after parachuting-in on the previous Saturday. Numerous citizens were acting in collusion with the terrorists, assisting them with intelligence gathering and surreptitious movement in the town and surrounding area.

Two members of Fredericton Sub-Division General Investigation Section also began to gather intelligence in an effort to locate the elusive BPPLA hideaway. At 12:15 p.m. on Tuesday, following up numerous rumours, and with the assistance of several civilian "sources", we located the general area of the BPPLA command post. The overall exercise commander and official referee, Lt. Col. J. R. MacPherson, Commanding Officer of the RCR, was apprised of this unexpected discovery and advised Insp. Zinck that all friendly forces activities would be "umpired out" for one hour to allow the BPPLA to regroup, so as not to terminate the exercise prematurely.

Friendly forces escorting "I.M. Pomme-de-Terre" (in light-coloured suit). Cpl. Jackman, his personal bodyguard, is in the dark-coloured suit.

