Omar Pacha in Mingrelia.

TURKISH CAMP, SUGDIDI, Nov. 14.-The correspondent of the Times says, -The anniver-Crimea last year finds us still encamped at Sugdidi, under a cloudless sky and bright sun. Our commissariat arrangements have involved a delay for a few days. It is not to be wondered at that, with the inadequate means of transport which our almost bankrupt Government places at Omar Pasha's command, he should find some difficulty, now that he is 40 miles distant from his nearest depot upon the seacoast, in provisioning a considerably larger army than that which nearly died of starvation within six miles of Balaklava, when England was straining every nerve to supply it. Hitherto we have not been able to calpassed, and although confidence is gradually be and they are bringing meat and vegetables in small six fee of water.

15TH .- The whole of the camp was struck this morning at daylight, and we marched through an undulating, well-wooded country to Chalta, were we found the still smouldering emhers of the Russian barracks and the storehouses The growing confidence of the population was testified by the fact that the inhabitants of some of the houses by the roadside had not quitted them upon the approach of the army, although they could not be induced to minister to onr wants, protesting that the Russians, before leaving, had appropriated all their live stock. Omer Pasha had given strict orders that no force was to be used in procuring supplies of this nature; but I found, in the course of my foraging expeditions, that in many instances the fowls said to be in Muscovite hands were snugly stowed away in some obscure outhouse, and upon the production of some bright silver sixpenses and the assurance that I was an Englishman, a Christian, and no bourhood of our camp was a picturesque old ruin, probably of Genoese construction, built in rable state of preservation, and a picturesque old received flat refusals to their request. arch way. Boston, Aug 30, 1854. Assayers to the State of Mass.

Mr. John Newell, of Boston, has exhibited to me a Lamp, and also containing vessels, furnished with gauze protectors, upon the principle of Bay's Anfety Lamp for miners. He has used both these instruments before me with inflammable fluids, and in both, when set on free, the flame was arrested by the wire gauze which is coated with silver. If the instruments are faithfully constructed, and carefully attended to, so that the wire gauze does not suffer injury from corrosion, wear or violence, I am of opinion that the protection will prove effectual against explosion. Nothing short of this conviction would induce me to countenance the continued nee of the burning fluid so called, as I have thought they ought to be entirely discarded, if not prohibited from use; so frequent, and dreadful are the accidents occasioned by ignorance and carelessness. In every case, glass lamps should be given up, and those of metal substituted, on account of the danger of fracture.
