INTRAMURAL HOCKEY

Last Sunday saw six teams in action at the York arena, with two decisive wins being chalked up and a rather close one in the third encounter. One game had to be postponed because of the pressures of exams catching up on some of the players. Next week, only two games are scheduled, again the result of the forthcoming exams.

In the first game last Sunday, the Forestry 34-21's edged the Residence boys by the narrow margin of 3-2. Beech of the winners picked up two goals, and Miller accounted for the third. Clark and Burns each hit the twine for the Residence. Play was clean, as only one minor penalty was handed out, that to Reid of the Foresters.

The second game saw the Axemen take over undisputed possession of first place as they downed the Artsmen 6-2, after the Artsmen had chalked up an early 2 goal lead.

Wagar lead the scoring with four goals — one the result of a penalty shot when one of the Artsmen fell on the puck in the goal crease. Hatcher picked up the other two goals, in typical Maurice Richard style. The losers goals came off the sticks of Jones and Cochran. The only penalty of the game was handed out to the Artsmen's goaltender for interference.

The last game of the afternoon saw the Science team take a decisive victory from the Engineers 12's. McFarlane of the Science team lead the scoring parade by adding four points to his total, as a result of four goals. Thompson dented the twine for the fifth Science goal. Ferguson and Douglas each counted for the Engineers. Three minor penalties were handed out by referee Ketch, one each to Ferguson of Science, and Washlurr and Thomas of the Engineers. Final score in this game was 5-2.

WATER POLO

Last Saturday afternoon the Intramural water polo league got under way up in the Residence pool, with four teams seeing the water. The fifth team was idle, because again here is a league with only five teams. All students who are interested are asked to get together and form another team, so that a full schedule can be run off each Saturday.

The first game of the afternoon saw the Residence II team defeat Tri-service by a score of 9-3. The Tri-service team is made up of members of the U.R.T.P., C.O.T.C. and U.N.T.D. on the campus. Point getters for the Residence team were Ed Pitre with 4, Patterson with 2, and Fowler, Nesbitt and Roovers with one apiece. Shorten and Mann each collected singles for the losers.

The Residence I team and the Foresters teed off in the second game, with the Foresters coming out on top by a 6-3 count. Beech for the winners put in 3 counters with MacDonald scoring 2 and Shulte 1. Pitre for the losers netted 2 and Stewart 1.

CURLING

The U.N.B. curlers had their opening session last Saturday night at the Fredericton Curling Rink. For the benefit of beginners, instructions in the fundamentals of the game were given by a senior club member, Keith Pugh. Rinks were drawn on spot, as the regular schedule will not begin until after Christmas. All those wishing to take part in the new year are asked to register at the Physical Education office immediately. The next session will be this Saturday night (Dec. 13th) from 8 to 10 p.m.

The following are some of the rules of curling etiquette, as taken from "An Analysis of the Art of Curling", by H. E. Weyman.

1. Don't forget to clean your stone before every shot.
 2. Don't skip from the hack.
 3. Don't crab about a bad shot; don't be too elated at a fluke.
 4. Don't cross the rink without making certain that there is not a player in the hack.
 5. Don't touch a moving stone with a broom or your body. Any infraction of this rule may result in the removal of the touched stone.
 6. Be ready to sweep from hog line to tee.
 7. Don't stand in the house unless you are skipping. Sweepers should remain between the hog lines.
 8. Don't, when skipping, let a wild stone which passes through the house smash into other stones or the curb.
 9. Don't speak to your opponent when he is set ready to play.
- Perhaps some of the above mentioned terms are new to the reader, but if you're interested in finding out what it is all about, then drop down to the curling rink next Saturday night.

SPORT-LITES

Close to half of the 105 players performing in the N.H.L. right now were born in the province of Ontario. Forty-seven of the 105 players first saw the light of day in Canada's most populated province.

Saskatchewan, a province noted for its hard wheat and outstanding hockey players was the birthplace of 20 National Leaguers. Close on the heels of Saskatchewan as a developer of top grade hockey players is Quebec. The second most populated province in Canada has sent 15 players into the N.H.L.

Thirteen of the 105 players in the N.H.L. were born in the Province of Manitoba. This prairie province has always been a hockey hotbed and every year rates up near the top in the development of hockey talent. Alberta was the birthplace of four National Leaguers and one came from New Brunswick.

There is only one player in the N.H.L. this season who was born in the United States. Pete Babando of the Chicago Black Hawks, born in Braeburn, Pa., is the solitary American born player in hockey's major league.

Two of the 105 players in the N.H.L. were born in Scotland and both are with the New York Rangers.

Dick Gamble, sophomore left-winger of the Montreal Canadiens is the only player in the league who was born in the Maritimes. Gamble was born in Moncton, N. B. Very few players have ever come out of the other two Maritime provinces of Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island.

Winnipeg, Manitoba, tops the Canadian cities every year as the birthplace of National League players, and this season is no exception. 11 N.H.L. players were born in the Manitoba capital. Montreal is right behind with ten, but if the adjoining cities of Lachine and Verdun are included with Montreal, it would bring the output of Canada's biggest city to 12. Greater Toronto has sent 8 players to the N.H.L. this season. The Saskatoon district has sent seven.

Varsity Basketball

Last Saturday night at the L. B. Gym, the U.N.B. men's basketball team played host to the Aroostock State Normal School team, and were trimmed by the visitors, 57-35. The game was marked by the amazing foul shooting of the Aroostock team who made 31 out of 45 attempts from the foul line.

U.N.B. couldn't do anything right, and at times the game looked more like football than basketball. The winners used a zone defence which the locals could do little with. This type is not usually used here due to the large size of the gym floor. The half-time score was 22-16 for the visitors, who kept the lead throughout the game.

A total of 27 personal fouls and 1 technical foul were called against U.N.B. while Aroostock State drew only 13 personal fouls. The scoring for the winners was well spread out with Lyford, Siles and Cahill notching 15, 11 and 10 points respectively. Top men for U.N.B. Varsity were Gorman, and Simpson with 8 and 6 points respectively. Eric Garland of the losers was the only player to be fouled out of the game with 5 fouls. Varsity will play its last fall game at Machias, Me., this coming Saturday, where they will meet Washington State Normal School Lineups:

AROOSTOCK—Adams 7, Cahill 10, Stridge 0, Spooner 2, Oliver 6, Crtter 0, Doughty 0, Lyford 15, Desmond 4, Siles 11, Jacques 2.

U.N.B.—Simpson 6, Garland 5, Ellison 4, Bowlin 2, Creeseman 0, Abernathy 3, O'Brien 0, Gorman 8, Bracken 2, Prentice 0, Burley 5, Stewart 0.

As Seen from the Bleachers

By the Spectator

This past week has been a quiet one on the sporting scene, and it appears to have presented your author with the opportune time for mention of a topic which was planned for last year, but which, due to prevailing circumstances, never came into being. The topic in question is the Van Dine awards and the selection of their recipients.

In the not too distant future the members of four of our leading athletic teams will be called together for the purpose of allotting these distinctions, that is, choosing the most valuable member of their squad. Sounds like a simple matter—why the concern? The problem is this;—despite the simplicity of the question itself the actual choosing of the most valuable player is a very delicate matter, one which can easily go astray. You don't think so? Let me point out that it even got out of hand among the leading baseball authorities in the U.S. in this year's selection of the most valuable player in the National League. Who did they pick?—Hank Sauer of the Cubs. Why? Brother, that IS a good question.

When one is setting out to make such a selection he must naturally have a standard on which to work. The best one we can think of is this: if you were starting up a new team in the N.L. and had all the players in the league from which to choose one for the nucleus of your club, which would you pick? He almost certainly would be the best, and thus the most valuable, of the entire lot. Now let us presume that you are one of those who believe that pitching is the major part of baseball, your selection would undoubtedly be either Robin Roberts or Sal Maglie. If you favoured catching it would be Roy Campanella or Walker Cooper. If fielding took your eye you would probably come up with either Duke Snider or Red Schendienst. In the hitting department it would have to be either Stan Musial or Jackie Robinson. Where is the name of Hank Sauer? It just doesn't appear. He certainly can't pitch or catch, his fielding is hardly better than average, and it therefore appears that he was chosen for his hitting ability. But the point is that he didn't even reach the .300 mark, and there are at least half a dozen for better sluggers in the N.L. Why he was even chosen, on questionable hitting ability alone, over a five-time batting champion! It is true that he was responsible for keeping the Cubs in the pennant fight right till the very end, but so did Musial with the Cards, Thompson with the Giants, and Robinson with the Dodgers, all better hitters who lead their team to greater results. And yet they choose Sauer!

Another glaring example was the picking of Roy Campanella the year before. Now, we are not criticizing the actual choice of Campy, as he is undoubtedly the number one catcher in the N.L. and one of its greatest competitors, but the catch to it is that a few weeks after he had been selected as the most valuable in his league a poll was held to pick the greatest, and thus the most valuable player in all baseball. Who did they pick, not Campy, the best in the N.L., nor Berra, the choice as the most valuable in the A.L., but a man by the name of Musial. Thus Stan was the most valuable player in all baseball, but he wasn't the most valuable in the N.L. Queer? Not especially, as it happens every day, that is why this column is being written.

We can see therefore that it is a problem which can even baffle the tops in authorities. What is to prevent it from happening on this campus? We know for a fact that it has happened before, we don't want to see it recur. When you are asked to make your decision, think of the standard which I have mentioned above. Use it as your basis for the decision. Forget personal likes or dislikes, petty differences and favouritism, and pick the one you would most want on your team. Remember, too, that while some people seem to think there is a difference between the best and the most valuable, the line is so thin as to be practically non-existent. Doesn't it appear reasonable that the best man on the team will naturally be the most valuable?—if there is a difference between these two, then it eludes the Spectator . . .
