The Horse Not Passing

AT the banquet held by the Ontario Plowmen's Association on the second evening of the tractor demonstration, Mr. Bartholomew, a representative of one of the tractor companies made the statement, that the horse was not passing. Coming from a man who is chairman of the committee in charge of tractor demonstrations in United States, and who was present at each of these demonstrations from Dallas, Texas, to Madison, Wis., it had great significance.

In support of this statement he said that horses were not being produced fast enough to meet the market demand. The automobile is selling at a great rate, many millions of dollars being spent annually for them. Yet one town in the state of Missouri has shipped thousands of horses daily for over two years, and cannot keep up with the demand. The tractor, Mr. Bartholomew claimed, was not going to displace the horse, but do the work they were not able to do.

Facts and opinions like those given by this author, will act as a stimulant to horse breeders. The annual crop should not be allowed to decline.

The Open Door

I know of a successful farmer and breeder who has spent much money in building and from a distance they have a very attractive appearance. Upon close observation, however, the sagging of doors and the absence of fastenings is very noticeable. Some of the doors are shattered, cracked and generally dilapidated. This condition is so noticeable that I was once led to enquire the reason. I was told that the weak point of the whole family seemed to be their failure to close and fasten a door after going through it. It is not a big job to keep doors about the buildings closed. On the doors of city offices we sometimes see the words, "Keep this door shut." A similar notice on some of the doors of farm buildings might have a good effect.
