

Anderson's New Modern Store In the West

IS now open to the general public—all our dry-goods, with the exception of a few odd lines, has been removed from Grace Building and is carefully arranged and placed in the various departments.

We are ready to cater to the wants of our patrons, to whom we extend a hearty invitation to call and see us.

Quite a different appearance here from Grace Building—it is bigger, brighter, and better and the stock is well displayed which should tend to make this New Building a busier store.

You know our new address—opposite the Eastern End of the General Post Office.

YPRES PEOPLE ARE HOMELESS

Ypres, Belgium, July 12.—(Correspondence). The last tenacious inhabitants of Ypres were dragged from their underground refuges and taken by force to places of safety a fortnight ago; the cellars themselves had ceased to afford protection from the continual pounding of the German shells. The town to-day looks like an unearthed imitation of Pompeii; not one of its 12,000 houses is intact and not a dozen of those that remain partly erect are repairable. The ancient pride of Flanders, if it ever rises from its ruins, must be entirely rebuilt from the foundation. Of the famous Hall, which three weeks ago still showed a semblance of resistance, there remains nothing but a single little tower standing out against the sky like a gigantic finger raised in protest. The only part of the walls remaining is a battered, breached remnant on the side of the "Grand Place." Only here and there is it possible by close inspection to discover any traces of the details of its former architectural beauty.

Now in Ruins.

There were 10,000 people here three weeks ago and it was still possible to enjoy a cup of tea at the cafe on the "Grand Place" while contemplating the agonizing "Halles"; to-day the only living creatures that remain are two cats sticking to the debris of their homes in the Rue de Thourout. No one knows what they live on and the British soldiers have been unable to capture them.

The dead silence that has fallen here is broken only by the occasional shell that stirs up the ruins, by the German guns firing over the town at Poperinghe, and by the musketry and machine gun fire from the trenches close by to the south. The silence is oppressive toward dusk when the artillery fire becomes desultory.

Protected by the ruins, one may approach so close to the first line as to get a vivid auricular impression of what is going on in the trenches. The "pang! pang! pang!" of the rifles with intervals of the "Pang-a-pang-a-pang-a-pang" of the machine guns become more intermittent as night falls, and then comes the surprising contrast of the refrain: "It's a long way to Tipperary," with the accompaniment of a piano that the Tommies dug out of the ruins and requisitioned for evening diversion.

Final Destruction.

The final destruction of Ypres followed the attack with asphyxiating gas. It is the common belief in Belgium that the wiping out of the town was a premeditated revenge for the failure of the effort to occupy it. Shells intended for the British lines or for the batteries in the rear might easily stray into the town, but, they say, the aim of the Germans is good enough not to waste in that way the thousands of tons of ammunition required to reduce the place to a stone heap, and the only military importance of the town is its proximity to the battle front. Counting the shots that went wide of any structure, it is estimated that more than a hundred thousand of different calibres were spent on Ypres. Thousands more were used during the gas attack along the route from Ypres to Furnes by which the Allies were expected to send reinforcements. All along the road for a few miles, deep funnel-shaped holes, sometimes on one side, sometimes on the other and often full in the center, still show how seriously the operation was organized. One of them lies directly in front of an enclosed plot of ground covered with field flowers above which rise 14 crosses. Here were buried the remains of a little detachment of British troops that were sought out by one of the 18-inch German shells while resting in an abandoned cottage on the edge of Ypres.

The eventual restoration of Ypres raises conflicting views, all of which originate from sentiment, for the town had long ago lost all commercial importance. The attachment of the inhabitants to the soil calls for restoration and to this is opposed the feeling that Ypres must remain as it is—a monument to the suffering of Flanders. If the town is rebuilt, say many of those who loved it for its traditions, let it be farther on along the banks of the Yser, while the ruins of the ancient town remain enclosed within monumental walls for the world to see in ages to come.

TWO WORTHIES

Two old Scotsmen were one day disputing as to who remembered the windier day. "I mind it bein' sic a wind," said one, that it took the crows three hours to flee hame frae the dominie's heil, and that's no' mair than a mile!" "Hoot mon!" the other replied, "I've seen it that windy that the crows had to walk hame!"

The Accusing Gold

It was when Ferdinand was king in Naples, back in a little ring of noisy years, forgot and gone. A whirl of mist across the dawn. A little legend of those years Stays to proclaim their toils and tears—

One little legend that, I wit, is in the Book of Judgment writ, And now the accusation of this rim, Will cry it into the ear of Time.

The king, to bind with crafty hold St. Francis of Castellamare, Flung to the friar a purse of gold (You should have seen the courtiers stare!) A thousand ducats as an alms To lay within God's empty plams. But Francis, friend of man, stooped down, And snatching a coin from the impious purse (Stamped with the Prince's royal crown, But stamped more deep with the people's curse), He bent it till it broke; and lo, Blood trickled out for all to know!

Take back your gold," the friar cried, The gold that props your pomp and pride. Behold the people's blood you drew Through stealthy treasons of the law. This blood proclaims the griefs and wrongs Of them to whom the gold belongs. Give all to them, if you would give The gold into God's hand, and live.

—Edwin Markham.

A DANGEROUS CITIZEN

Surgeon General W. C. Gorgas, draining Panama marshes and bringing health to the men working in a climate that had decimated the French, was a most estimable citizen. Many people have been glad to honor him for his great work. But Major General W. C. Gorgas, proposing to add thirteen years to the average of human life by doubling the wages of workmen, is in a fair way to be denounced as a dangerous citizen. Doubling the wages of workmen can be done only by taking from the House of Have and giving to the House of Want. Destroying insect parasites is popular; restraining human parasites is dangerous.—The Public (Chicago).

Carranza Establishes Wireless Station At Chapultepec

Washington, July 18.—General Carranza has ordered the erection of a wireless station at Chapultepec to insure constant communication between Mexico City and Vera Cruz. United States Consul Silliman at Vera Cruz so reported to-day after having been in direct communication with the Brazilian minister in the capital.

Protection Guaranteed

At a conference yesterday between the Brazilian minister, the British charge and representatives of the Carranza forces, full guarantees of protection were given with the notice that there will be severe punishment for an infraction of the order. Consul Silliman also confirmed other despatches from Mexico City, that General Gonzales had captured the waterworks which had been cut off by the Zapata forces evacuating the city.

Another message to the state department said General Villa evidently has evacuated Aguascalientes, his forces which had been in conflict with General Obregon's troops near that point, proceeding northward.

Communication between Mexico City and Aguascalientes, the despatch adds, was expected to be established soon. There were no advices on the reported capture of Queretaro by Villa troops.

FEW CLEAN WOUNDS

London, July 14.—Clean wounds apparently do not exist, said Dr. H. S. Souttar, late surgeon-in-chief of the Belgian Field Hospital, in a lecture before the Royal Society of Medicine. Much has been written about the clean wound left by the modern bullet, but the doctor never met one in his experience in Flanders, and a colleague who had treated 10,000 wounds in the present campaign confirmed this opinion. Every wound is infected, although not all the organisms produce disease.

Dr. Souttar found it was a mistaken idea a wounded man could apply his first dressing properly. It required clean hands and non-interference with the actual wound. His instructions were that the skin around the wound should be disinfected with iodine, carbolic, or even soap and water, but the wound should not be touched. External appearances of wounds are often deceptive. Back of a small puncture in the skin may be a cavity as large as a fist, perhaps with a piece of shell or a bullet at the bottom.

As it is with implements we use, so it is with men we employ. The men of quality are in demand. They come to the front. They make their way while second-rate men drop behind.

"Victory" Flour

MADE IN A NEW MILL

TWICE as much "Victory" Flour has been sold this year. Why? Because as the flour becomes known the demand increases. "Victory" Flour is the highest grade imported to this Colony and nothing better milled.

Get out of the rut of always asking for the same brand that you bought ten years ago, as we represent a new and up-to-date mill, and the old known brands of flour cannot be made from a new mill, unless they have a fire, as it would cost too much to pull down a fairly good mill to build a new mill, with all the latest machinery, such as the mill we represent.

Remember the name and ask for "Victory" Flour, sold by all the leading merchants, and well and favorably known by the F.P.U.
