ARE HOME AGAIN

Both Brantford Regiments Enjoyed Camp at Niagara—No Mishaps.

The Dufferin Rifles 38th. Regiment returned home yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock from Niagara, after a 5 days stay in camp there. The regiment had 309 men in camp this year, the largest number that have ever gone down from Brantford and they were the largest single battalion in camp. The boys carried off the football championship again, defeating all other regimental teams. The sham battle on Thursday was greatly enjoyed by the men, as in fact was every part of the camp life. No cases of serious illness were encountered and the boys returned safely home without any serious mishap.

Dragoons Home.
The 25th Brant Dragoons returned home last night from Niagara camp, where they had been under canvas for 12 days under Lt.-Col. Muir and Majors Leonard and Smith. The regiment had a strength of 280 men at camp, and the men report a fine time both at drill and at the mess. All enjoyed the sham fight especially, and there were no serious accidents to any of the men.

Messrs. Fred C. Heyd and Sidney Smith manager of the East End branch of the Bank of Hamilton are leaving to-morrow on a three months' trip to Europe.

Building Permit.
E. H. Webling, 344 Colborne St., has taken out a permit for alterations to his brick store, estimated at $350.

Postponed.
The Paris lady golfers were to have played the Brantford ladies today, but the match has been postponed to a later date.

No Thieving.
There were no burglaries, no robberies and no thieving reported to the police during the visit of the circus. Pickpockets were evidently scarce, as nobody has yet reported losing anything of value.

Cleaned Up.
Three vagrants were cleaned up at the circus yesterday by the police, and they will be dealt with by the bench on Tuesday next. The city clean-up amounted to three drunks, who have been bailed out.

D.D.D. In Hospitals; Standard Skin Cure

How many hospital patients, suffering from the frightful itch, the raw scorching pain of skin disease, have been soothed to sleep by a soothing fluid washed in by the nurse's hands? That fluid is the famous D. D. D. Prescription for eczema.

The supervising nurse of one of our prominent Catholic institutions (nursing home and institute on application), writes regarding a patient: "The disease had eaten her eye-brows away. Her nose and lips had become disfigured. Since the use of D. D. D., her eyebrows are growing, her nose and face have assumed their natural expression."

How many eczema sufferers are paying their doctors for regular treatment and are being treated with the same soothing, healing fluid.

Dr. Geo. T. Richardson frankly writes, "D. D. D. is superior to anything I have ever found. Soft and soothing, yet a powerful agent."

To do the work, D. D. D. Prescription must be applied according to directions given in the pamphlet around every bottle. Follow these directions—and see.

And it certainly takes away the itch at once—the moment the liquid is applied. The skin is soothed, calmed—so thoroughly refreshed—delightfully cooled.

All druggists of standing have the famous specific as well as the efficient D. D. D. Skin Soap.

But we are so confident of the merits of this prescription that we will refund the purchase price of the first full size bottle if it fails to reach your case. You alone are to judge.

ALL CROOKED IS KIPLING'S VIEW

Vitriolic Speech is Delivered by Poet at Political Meeting.

LONDON, June 13.—It is seldom indeed that Rudyard Kipling speaks in public. When he does do so, he always says something very much to the point. Three or four years ago he was asked to "say a few words" at a certain dinner in London. He accepted the invitation much to the surprise of his hearers. He proved to be a glass of water, the evening, and took the shine off everything else that was said on the same occasion.

Mr. Kipling made a rather important speech on the political situation at an anti-home rule demonstration at Tisbury. Wells a few nights ago its importance may be gauged by the varying stories about it in the London papers. Columns of verbatim reports appear in the Unionist journals while the Liberal papers speak of the "scurrilous partisan attack" which Mr. Kipling made on the government.

Out-Heroded Leaders
He "out-heroded the leaders of his own party in reckless accusations of crime and corruption," says the Daily Chronicle. The speech was certainly full of bitterness. Pausing at one moment in the course of it, Mr. Kipling took a glass of water, remarking, "You've got to clean your mouth for this filth."

Mr. Kipling began by saying: "When I was a young man in India I used to report criminal cases for the newspaper that employed me. It was interesting work, because it introduced me to forgers and embezzlers, and murderers and enterprising gentlemen of that kind. (Laughter) Sometimes after I had reported their trial I used to visit my friends in jail when they were doing their sentences. I remember one man there who got off with a life sentence for murder. He was a clever, smooth spoken chap, and he told me what he called the story of his life. It was not a very truthful account, but he finished by one true sentence. He said: 'Take it from me that when a man starts crooked, one thing leads to another till he finds himself in such a position that he has to put somebody out of the way to get straight again. (Laughter.)

Started Crooked.
"Well, that exactly describes the present position of the Cabinet. (Cheers.) They started crooked; one thing led to another till they found themselves in such a position that they had to put some one out of the way to get straight again. (Cheers.)

"Nearly all practical and constructive crime that isn't done for the sake of a woman is done for the sake of money. I won't make wild statements about other people's careers—we can leave that to the Chancellor of the Exchequer—(laughter)—but I should like to draw your attention to these plain acknowledged facts. We know that with few exceptions the members of the Cabinet are not men of large private means or independent incomes."

The speaker remarked that persons who are dependent on their salaries "take good care to make the billies that gives them their salaries as permanent as possible." One thing marked. He then spoke of the passage of the Parliament Act, by which the Cabinet "assured itself a straight run of at least five years' salary."

It Is All Crooked.
Mr. Kipling said that the Cabinet had promised on its word of honor that a second chamber should be created as soon as possible—but that was another bit of crooked work. Cheers punctuated the entire speech.

He then referred to the passage of the act providing for the payment of members of Parliament. "It was crooked work," he said, "but, as the Premier had pointed out, the House of Commons was the supreme and ultimate master of the situation. As long as the Cabinet stayed in office every coalition member of Parliament knew that he would get his cheque for £100 every quarter. Men will do a great deal for the sake of £400 a year certain for five years. (Laughter and cheers.)

"You see how one thing leads to another. The Parliament Act, and the fact that no second chamber had been created, prevented the possibility of any interference by electors outside. Payment of members prevented any revolt on the part of members inside the House. The Cabinet were in the position of a firm and fraudulent solicitors who had got an unlimited power of attorney from a client by false pretences, and could dispose of their client's estate as they pleased."

Openly Degraded.
Mr. Kipling then went on to speak of the Home Rule bill. "Our country," he said, "has been openly degraded in the eyes of all nations that set any store by the purity of their administrators. But so far that had been all. Till the Home Rule bill was produced the Cabinet had done nothing which fatally and irretrievably compromised the unity of Great Britain, or the safety of the Empire, or made existence unendurable to any large section of the King's subjects."

supports it is entitled to the most substantial guarantees against any possible impudence."

After arguing in favor of his own scheme and condemning that of the Provisional Committee, Mr. Redmond says: "Unless the committee can see a way to reconsider its decision and adopt my proposal, I must appeal to all supporters of the party in the volunteer movement to organize immediate county committees, which shall be quite independent of the Provisional Committee, and to maintain an independent county government until the organization is sufficiently complete to make possible the holding of a representative convention to elect a permanent governing body."

The Provisional Committee includes Professors MacNeill, Kettle and MacDonough, of the National University; Sir Roger Casement, who exposed the rubber scandals in Peru, and Col. Moore, a brother of the novelist, George Moore. Prof. Kettle strongly disapproves of the action of his fellow-members on the Provisional Committee, which is receiving much general condemnation.

They Were Winners.
The Duffs won the Foot-ball championship of the camp again for the 3rd year in succession. Cr. Sergt. G. Crouch won in the walking race, and Sergt. H. Martin won the long jump, starting broad jump and running broad jump.

Good Traffic Facilities.
Detective Bryce of Ringlings Circus complimented the Chief Constable upon the excellent traffic facilities afforded in Brantford. He thought the regulations were very good, and remarked that in all his experience his carters had never had easier transport.
