The OBSERVER will be sent a full year to any Canadian address for 50 cents, cash in advance. American subscribers must pay $1.00 per year.

ADVERTISING RATES.

So frequently is The Observer called upon to give free notices for this, that, and the other thing that we must for our own protection quote from the card of advertising rates as follows:

"We have no space to give away except in a case of notice of meetings for church, charitable, or other matters, when no admission fee or collection is taken. We are always glad to give free publicity to such. All other matters that go in The Observer for the financial gain of any individual or society must be paid for at the regular rates."

Our readers will notice that each week our local columns contain what is apparently advertising matter. This is in reality advertising matter and one of our chief sources of revenue. We charge invariably five cents per line. No one gets a free business puff. Advertising space is our stock in trade and we cannot afford to dispose of it without getting its value in cash.

During the past few months we have given free space to the announcement of money-making projects. We cannot afford to do this and must now draw the line. The public will understand we make no charge in the case of notices as mentioned above. All other announcements of meetings, "wanted," for sale, and other ads, cards of thanks and obituary poetry will be charged for at the rate of 5 cents a line.

This rate is to be paid at the time the copy is sent in. A line averages six words.

"200 SOBER MEN."

The Woodstock Press this week displays ill temper because of the grand success attending the Carvell banquet here and of the wide publicity given the quiet little affair. The Press resents the inference that drinking of liquor was indulged in at the Flemming banquet in Woodstock. It says, "If the grit papers infer that liquor was used at the Woodstock banquet they are not telling the truth." It is a matter not only of fact but of deep regret with many decent Conservatives that there was a "superabundance of alcoholic beverages used at the Flemming banquet and people became drunk there who were never intoxicated before in their lives. The tale related by a prominent Conservative of Centreville shows that a banquet given there was similarly marred. No liquor of any kind was served at the Hartland banquet and this was not an accident either. At the first meeting of citizens to arrange the Carvell banquet a unanimous motion was passed that no liquor of any kind be served.

The Press says there were not 200 sober men in the hall, nor nearly that number present. As a matter of fact there were 201 men at the banquet. Two hundred of them were absolutely sober and the odd one was only slightly jagged. He is one of the oldest subscribers of the Press and he never cast a Liberal vote in his life.

THE RIGBY BILL.

In vigorous language A. R. Rigby voices his complaint in an other part of this paper. He sought from the government a charter to enable him to build a dam at an ideal site on the Becaguimac and to manufacture electricity for lighting and power purposes and to operate mills and factories. The sole opposition to his project came through F. E. Sayre who operates a saw-mill at the mouth of the stream. A large majority of the residents of Hartland and vicinity were keenly interested in the scheme and hoped to see it mature.

Mr. Sayre had no tenable ground on which to base his opposition. But Mr. Rigby had got rather the best of him in a separate deal and Mr. Sayre has since held an uncompromising attitude toward him. Apart from this, Premier Flemming, who had it in his power to see the bill passed had broken friendship with Mr. Rigby over the matter of the Federal election last September. Mr. Flemming told Mr. Rigby at that time that if he voted for Carvell it would be useless for him to bring his bill before the Legislature.

That is the kind of a man Mr. Flemming is.

SHOCKING DEATH.

James Barker Succumbs to Injuries Received on Tuesday.

A shocking accident occurred at Lower Brighton on Tuesday afternoon, and as a result, James Barker, a well known resident of the place, lies dead. The unfortunate man was assisting in the operation of a circular wood-sawing machine in the yard of George Teddie when his clothing caught in the shaft. His coat, sweater and shirt were torn from him and wrapped round his neck. He was nearly strangled when rescued from this position, but he soon regained consciousness and lived until 9 o'clock yesterday morning. His injury was internal and caused great suffering.

He was about 38 years of age and leaves a wife, who is a daughter of Joseph Clowes, and two children. The funeral services will be held tomorrow.
