Mr. J. B. Rusk, Ruskviv, Ont., says: "I have used Hegyard's Yellow Oil for Chilblains, and found it most effectual. It relieved the irritation almost immediately, and a few applications made a complete cure."

MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Merry Christmas! hear the greeting Ring out on every hand; Merry Christmas! shout the greeting, Christian men of every land. Merry Christmas to the stranger Who is far from home and kin! Merry Christmas to the fallen Who are sinking low in sin! Merry Christmas to the wealthy! Merry Christmas to the poor! Merry Christmas to the beggar Who comes knocking at the door! Merry Christmas to the weary! Merry Christmas to the sad! Merry Christmas to the homeless Who have naught to make them glad!

Merry Christmas to all nations! Ring the greeting out again. Merry Christmas to all the people! "Peace on earth, good will to men!"

PART IV. THE STOCKADE.

I had not gone a hundred yards when I came on the stockade. This was how it was: A spring of clear water arose at the top of the knoll. Well on the knoll, and inclosing the spring, they had cleaved a stout log house, fit to hold two score people on a pinch, and loop-holed for musketry on every side. All around this they had cleared a wide space, and then the thing was completed by a paling six feet high without door or opening, too strong to pull down without time and labor, and too open to shelter the besiegers. The people in the log house had them in every way; they stood quiet in the shelter and shot the others like partridges. All they wanted was a good watch and food; for short of a complete surprise, they might have held the place against a regiment. What particularly took my fancy was the spring. For, though we had a good enough piece of it in the cabin of the Hispaniola, with plenty of arms and ammunition, and things to eat, and excellent wine, there had been one thing overlooked—we had no water. I was thinking this over, when there came ringing over the island the cry of a man at the point of death. I was not new to violent death—I have served his Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland, and got a wound myself at Fontenoy—but I know my pulse was not to carry and one. "Jim Hawkins is gone," was my first thought. It is something to have been an old soldier, but more still to have been a doctor. There is no time to dilly-dally in our work. And so now I made up my mind instantly, and with no time lost returned to the shore and jumped on board the jolly-boat. By good fortune Hunter pulled a good oar. We made the water fly, and the boat was soon alongside and I aboard the schooner. I found them all shaken, as was natural. The squire was sitting down, as white as a sheet, thinking of the harm he had led us to, the good soul, and one of the six forecastle hands was little better. "There's a man," said Captain Smollett, nodding towards him, "now to this work. He comes night-hand fainting, doctor, when he heard the cry. Another touch of the rudder and that man would join us." I told my plans to the captain, and between us we stilled on the details of its accomplishment. We put old Redruth in the gallery between the cabin and the forecastle, with three or four loaded muskets and a mattress for protection. Hunter brought the boat round under the stern post, and Joyce and I set to work loading her with powder, tins, muskets, bags of biscuits, kegs of pork, a cask of cognac, and my invaluable medicine chest. In the meantime the squire and the captain stayed on deck, and the latter hailed the cockswain, who was the principal man aboard. "Mr. Harde," he said, "here are two of us with a brace of pistols each. If any two of you six make a signal of any description, that man's dead."

"They was a good deal taken aback; and after a little consultation, one of all tumbled down the fore companion, thinking, no doubt, to take us on the rear. But when they saw Redruth waiting for them in the upper-deck galley, they went about ship at once, and a head popped out again on deck. "Down, dog!" cried the captain. And the head popped back again, and we heard no more for the time of these six very faint-hearted seamen. By this time, tumbling things in as they came, we had the jolly-boat loaded as much as we dared. Joyce and I got cut through the stern post, and we made for shore again, as fast as care could take us. This second trip fairly aroused the watchers along shore. "Lillibulero" was dropped again, and before we lost sight of them behind the little point, one of them whipped ashore and disappeared. I had half a mind to change my plan and destroy their boats, but I feared that Silver and the others might be close at hand, and all might very well be lost by trying for too much. We had soon touched land in the same place as before and set to provision the block-house. All three made the first journey, heavily laden, and tossed our stores over the palisade. Then, leaving Joyce to guard them—one man, to be sure, but with half a dozen muskets—Hunter and I returned to the jolly-boat, and loaded ourselves once more. So we proceeded, without pausing to take breath, till the whole cargo was bestowed, when the two servants took up their position in the block-house, and I, with all my power, sculled back to the Hispaniola. That we should have ricked a second boat-load seems more daring than it really was. They had the advantage of numbers, of course, but we had the advantage of arms. Not one of the men ashore had a musket, and before they could get within range for pistol shooting, we flattered ourselves we should be able to give a good account of a half-dozen at least. The squire was waiting for me at the stern window, all his furniture gone from him. He caught the painter and made it fast, and we fell to loading the boat for our very lives. Powder, powder and biscuit was the cargo, with only a musket and a cutlass apiece for squire and me and Redruth and the captain. The rest of the arms we dropped overboard in two fathoms and a half of water, so that we could see the bright steel shining far below us in the sun on the clean, sandy bottom. By this time the tide was beginning to ebb; and the ship was swinging round to her anchor. Voices were heard faintly hallooing in the direction of the two gigs; and though this reassured us for Joyce and Hunter, who were well to the eastward, it warned our party to be off. Redruth retreated from his place in the gallery and dropped into the boat, which we then brought round to the ship's counter, to be handier for captain Smollett. "Now, men, said he, "do you hear me?" There was no answer from the forecastle. "It's to you Abraham Gray. It's to you I am speaking." Still no reply. "Gray," resumed Mr. Smollett, a little louder, "I am leaving this ship and I order you to follow your captain. I know you are a good man at bottom, and I dare say not one of the lot of you's as bad as he makes out. I have my watch in my hand. I give you thirty seconds to join me in going." There was a pause. "Come, my fine fellow," continued the captain, don't hang so long in stays, I'm risking my life and the lives of these good gentlemen every second." There was a sudden scuffle, a sound of blows, and out burst Abraham Gray with a knife out on the side of the cheek, and came rushing to the captain, like a dog to the whistle. "I'm with you, sir," said he. And the next moment he and the captain had dropped aboard of us, and we had shoved off and given way. We were clear out of the ship, but not yet ashore in our stockade.

Five grown men, and three of them—Trelawney, Redruth, and the captain—over six feet high, was already more than she was meant to carry. Add to that the bread-bags, the gunwale was lipping astern. Several times we shipped a little water, and it were all soaking wet before we had gone a hundred yards. The captain made us trim the boat, lie a little more evenly. All the same, we were afraid to breathe. In the second place, the ebb was now making—a strong, rippling current running westward through the basin, and then southward and seaward down the straits by which we were passing. Even the ripples were a danger, for it was our true course, and away from place behind the point the current have its way come ashore beside the pirates might appear to us.

Here is a suggestion: "Good morning, Jennie, I have brought you a nice present," said Gertrude, as she handed her friend a neatly wrapped package. The pale, weary looking girl, who was slowly recovering from severe illness, opened the bundle and held up a large bottle of clear, rich medicine. "Hood's Sarsaparilla!" she exclaimed. "I have been reading about it today and wished I had a bottle." On New Year's Day Jennie was able to be out on the street, and to her friends who remained how well she was looking she simply said, "Hood's Sarsaparilla," and every one of them knew it was this great medicine that had given back her health. KIDNEY DISEASE FOR TEN YEARS.

A Glen Miller Man's Terrible Trial. He Found a Cure at Last in Doan's Kidney Pills.

Mr. P. M. Burk, who is a well-known resident of Glen Miller, Hastings Co., Ont., was afflicted with kidney trouble for ten years. So pleased is he at having found in Doan's Kidney Pills a cure for his ailments which he had begun to think were incurable, that he wrote the following statement of his case so that others similarly afflicted may profit by his experience: "I have been afflicted with kidney trouble for about ten years and have tried several remedies but never received any real benefit until I started taking Doan's Kidney Pills. My back used to constantly ache and my urine was high colored and milky looking at times. Since I have finished the third box of Doan's Kidney Pills I am happy to state that I am not bothered with backache at all and my urine is clear as crystal. I feel confident that these pills are the best kidney specific in the country."

WOMEN WILL TALK.

Can't Blame them for Telling each other about MILDEN'S Heart and Nerve Pills. Mrs. Hannah Holmes, St. James Street, St. John, N. B., relates her experience with the heart and diseases, accompanied by another feeling which prevented me from resting. My appetite was poor and I was much run down and debilitated. "Since I started using Mildren's Heart and Nerve Pills, the smothering feeling the fluttering has disappeared, and I have been wonderfully built up through the tonic effect of the pills. I now feel stronger and better than for many years and cannot say too much in praise of the remedy which saved my long lost health."

THE GREAT REMEDY FOR WEAK NERVOUS WOMEN.

It's only natural that when a woman finds a remedy which cures her nervousness and weakness, relieves her pains and aches, puts color in her cheek and vitality in her whole system, she should be anxious to let her suffering sisters know of it. Mrs. Hannah Holmes, St. James Street, St. John, N. B., relates her experience with this remedy as follows: "For some years I have been troubled with fluttering of the heart and dizziness, accompanied by another feeling which prevented me from resting. My appetite was poor and I was much run down and debilitated. "Since I started using Mildren's Heart and Nerve Pills, the smothering feeling the fluttering has disappeared, and I have been wonderfully built up through the tonic effect of the pills. I now feel stronger and better than for many years and cannot say too much in praise of the remedy which saved my long lost health."
