IMAGINATION.

By EUTE CAMERON.

"One of the hardest things in the world," said the late Joseph Fels, "is to convince the man with a full stomach that there is somebody hungry."

Mr. Fels' aphorism is very true in the sense in which he means it, and true in a thousand other senses besides.

It is very difficult for anyone who has not experienced any given form of discomfort to sense that discomfort and realize that other people feel it. The well-fed man may know, as an abstract proposition, that other people are hungry, but he does not sense it as an actual, painful fact.

If we could really sense other men's annoyances and troubles—of course, I don't mean actually suffer from them—but realize them, sense them, half of selfishness in the world would take wings to itself.

For it isn't so much because we do not know, that we permit others to suffer annoyances or misery.

For instance, I have often noticed that a woman who has had to prepare meals and who therefore knows how hard it is to keep them appetizing if they are delayed, will seldom permit herself to be late to the table. It is almost invariably the masculine members of the family, or these feminine members who have not had experience in housework, who are persistently careless about being on time to their meals.

A mother told me the other day that her older daughter was much more considerate and sympathetic to her than her younger. "You see," she explained, "my older daughter is married and has children of her own. I find that makes a great deal of difference, my dear. I don't blame Hilda, for I'm sure she will be different when she has children of her own and knows how much mothers suffer for children and how much children mean to them."

It takes either much experience or much imagination to be truly unselfish.

The most unselfish man in intention whom I know is sometimes quite selfish in deed because he lacks imagination. He is generous to a fault with money; he gives his wife more luxuries than he has himself; he does many kind things for her. But because he utterly lacks imagination to sense the things that will make her feel hurt or unhappy he is sometimes very selfish indeed.

The same place which is paved with good intentions is walled in with the selfishness of those who mean to be unselfish but don't have enough imagination to know how to be.

"How so?" you say. "Should one be blamed for lack of imagination? Surely, my friend. For this kind of imagination—perhaps we'd do better to call it the ability to put yourself in his place—is something which every one of us could and ought to cultivate."

Afternoon
With a Prodigy.

"All musical England is talking of Willy Ferrego, the wonderful boy, aged seven and a half—so absurdly the youngest symphony conductor in the world—who has conducted the Imperial Orchestra before the Russian Court, who took London first in incredulity, then in amazement, and then by storm, quite recently, when he led the ninety performers of the New Symphony Orchestra at the Albert Hall," says Twell Brix in the Daily Mail.

"And while all England has been talking of Willy Ferrego, I rejoice that Willy Ferrego—utterly unconscious of and uninterested in his fame—has been eating numberless criss sandwiches, and that he and I escaped from the celebrities who crowded his London home to see him, and that we enlisted two maidservants and a soldierly person aged two, and that we have marched round a kitchen in terrible array, while I roared to Willy like a Prussian drill officer, while the soldierly person aged two fobbed us indiscriminately with the staff of a Union Jack, and while Willy—the leader of the Albert Hall orchestra—banged at his drum—and, thank Heaven, banged it out of tune!"

The Editor of "Punch."

The knighthood conferred upon Owen Seaman is a fitting tribute to the most courteous and kindly of English editors. Before he joined the staff, Punch was a close corporation. The outside contributor was ignored. Punch was written by the staff. With the advent of Mr. Seaman this was all changed. However obscure the writer might be, his contribution was carefully considered. If it was returned, well, one has heard, says the Manchester Guardian, that Mr. Seaman could reject an article more pleasantly than most editors could accept one. Punch's literary, artistic and commercial advance during the past ten years is almost entirely due to the ability and discernment of its present editor. Perhaps, however, some of the success of Punch as a national institution is due to the fact that it holds the balance fairly between parties. This may be accounted

Feet Heaviest
When Asleep.

You often hear a person complain of his head feeling "heavy" after a long sleep. As a matter of fact, his head is considerably lighter and his legs and feet just that much heavier when he gets up than when he went to bed.

Experiments have shown that if a man goes to sleep on a bed balanced exactly at the middle of his weight his head begins to tip slowly up and his feet to go down. This is due to the fact that when we sleep the blood in the brain goes off to other parts of the body. The moment the brain wakes to life again it draws the blood back.

Another of the curious facts brought to light by the scientists who are fond of trying to solve the mystery of sleep is that when one is fast asleep some part of the brain or several parts of it may at the same time be awake. A man may walk, talk, or sing, and yet at the same time be safely in the land of nod.

It is very difficult to decide what part of the brain really does sleep. Our sense of time, for instance, is stronger when we sleep than when we are awake. Experiments conducted some years ago on a number of men and women between the ages of twenty and thirty showed that 60 per cent. of them were able to wake up in the morning at any time they had decided upon the night before. Another curious fact about sleep is that the further the part of the body is away from the brain the less soundly it sleeps. A touch on the toe will awaken one much more readily than a touch of the shoulder.

"Time Distributor."

If there is one business that can claim to be unique it is surely that of "time-distributor," pursued by a lady who calls every Monday morning at Greenwich observatory, adjusts her chronometer by the standard, clock there and then makes a tour of a large number of suburban clock-makers and other shopkeepers, leaving the correct Greenwich time en route. The business was founded many years ago by the lady's mother, says the "Daily Chronicle" (London), who obtained special permission from the astronomer-general, and the present "time-distributor," who has been sixteen years on her rounds, still derives a modest income from it, despite the cheap facilities for electrical synchronizing of clocks throughout the metropolis.

Where Responsibility Lies.

No matter how large, or how small, a business may be, nobody can deny that its Office is the nerve centre of the firm. Every transaction, important or trivial, must be recorded at the Office. An order is received at the Office, its history is recorded at the Office, and finally payment is received at the Office. If the Office makes an error the firm stands the loss. That's why you must be sure that your office is modern and dependably equipped for the care of all important papers. To do this effectively you need the up-to-date equipment of the "GLOBE-WERNICKE CO." When sixty offices in St. John's have found this necessity this equipment can surely be of use to you. Mr. Percie Johnson represents this world known firm in Newfoundland.—april 7, m.

Wild Oats.

You're sowing wild oats, William Henry Fitzjames, you're playing with others, the dissolute games! when you should be sleeping you're still on the jump, a-painting the village clear down to the dump; and ancient tradition looks foolishly kind on chaps like yourself who are going it blind; it says, "Let them frolic like lunatic goats, for youths must be youths, and must sow their wild oats." But merry carousers who caper and prance must pay for the fiddler when done is the dance. Alas for the oats that you carelessly sow! You find they are thistles when started to grow, and though you may live for a cycle, my friend they'll prick you and sting you right up to the end. I sowed fifty bushels of oats that were wild, and while I was sowing I recklessly smiled; I laughed at the future and lifted gay tunes and now I am old I am harvesting prunes. With aches in my body and grief in my soul, and doctors and druggists despoiling my roll, the wearisome knowledge my consciousness totes, that all of my troubles are due to wild oats. Be wise in the morning of life, oh, be wise!—And sidestep the bait of the father of lies; for wasting the moments and sowing wild oats will lead you to chewing the husks with the shotes.

Meigle's Report.

The s.s. Meigle, Capt. Goobie, which reached Humbermouth yesterday morning from the Straits, brings discouraging news of the fishery outlook. The following is a copy of a message received by the Reid Co. from Capt. Goobie: "Made every port of call to Battle Harbor going and returning. Experienced strong gales going down but had fine weather returning. There is no ice from Red Bay to Battle Harbor, nor no sign of codfish in the Straits."

GLENCOE HERE.—The s.s. Glencoe arrived here yesterday from Port aux Basques after a 31 hours' run. She will go on dock to get her annual cleaning up. During her absence the Invermore is doing the S.W. Coast service.
