Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

A BOOK WHICH HAS HELPED ME.
 If I were asked and adaptable to any emergency is that they have no real form shows up instantly when you try to put them down within the four corners of a sheet of paper."

The same gain in definiteness comes to a plan or a good intention when you set it down in writing and put a time limit on it.

What Joy In Getting One Hundred Per Cent.
 One of the rewards of this way of keeping your energy properly directed and concentrated is in the joy of crossing off those jobs at night. Such a pride as one feels when one gets one hundred per cent!

Of course, one must be careful not to drive one's self too hard. You must be able to judge your capacity and not constantly put down more things than you can do. Because if you do and never get them done, that breeds discouragement, and discouragement breeds relaxation of effort.

Also you must be able to throw the whole thing overboard on a way when some worthwhile adventure beckons, or when you are not well and everything you do takes twice as much out of you as it would under normal conditions. Knowing when to break rules on the tenth day is only second in importance to having the strength of mind to keep them on the other nine.

Perhaps it seems absurd, but the help that book gives me in conquering my cardinal sin of procrastination, and in keeping after the things that need most to be done, is enormous.

Nothing gives definiteness to a purpose like writing it down. What was formerly a nebulous good intention, something that you meant to do to-day but that you may perhaps put off until to-morrow or the next day, becomes a part of your day's routine when you get it written down. And it is perfectly wonderful how you can find time to do the things you thus plan to do.

How To Give Definiteness To An Idea.
 Did you by any chance see in the current number of a well known magazine the advice of a famous business man on what to do when you get an idea. The first thing was "Make your plan in writing."

"Most of us carry our plans in our head," he says. "At night in bed they seem particularly marvelous. The reason that they seem so splendid Fashions and Fads.

Cape collars are enormous. Wider skirts are suggested. A new blue is called the true blue. A novel muff is of Parma violets. Frocks are very much befowered. Windsor ties are great favorites. Bathing suits are of worsted jersey.

Kolinsky fur trims brown satin wraps. Skirts have a tendency to side drapery. Corsets with higher tops are promised. Fashion suggests the black frock for teatime. White gloves are creeping up to the elbows. The silhouette promises to be more ample. The suit continues to be straight and narrow. Blouses have a way of running to the knees. Many of the new hats show glycerine ostrich. Summer hats are made of taffeta in soft shapes. Macramé lace is being used on linen overblouses. Triple revers are a pretty feature of the new coats. Waistcoats for summer suits are of braided pongee. A woven lace straw hat chooses a mushroom shape. Pleatings and tuckings are revived for neck wear. Stiff linen collars are very popular for the dark suit. Heavy tan hure coats are decorated with self stitching. Broad pocket flaps of the Louis XVI type are back again. The gowns that combine pink and blue are decidedly French. The silk poplin skirt should be in every summer wardrobe. The accordion pleated skirt seems never to go out of fashion.

THE SAND MAN.
 The Sand Man is a funny chap that makes you want to take a nap. An' my Pa says he knows him well. But what he looks like I can't tell. Coz when my Pa says, "Howdy do, An' Mr. Sand Man, how are you?" I rub my eyes a bit an' stare. An' there ain't no one standin' there. It is a funny thing to me That I can't see what Pa can see.

Sometimes Pa takes us for a ride, An' I get sittin' by his side. An' he looks at the stars an' things Which every evening always brings, An' Pa says: "Bud, I guess we'll meet 'em some day."

The Sand Man further down the street; Right now he ought to be in sight, He's due about this time o'night. He should be waitin' somewhere near. I thought 'I'd pick him up right here."

We jog along a block or two, An' then Pa says: "Well, howdy-do, Climb in, without a word of fuss, We'll ride you into town with us." An' Pa an' he sit there an' chat, Discussin' this an' arguin' that, But I can't tell you what is said, Coz when I wake up I'm in bed. It is a funny thing to me Why I can't see what Pa can see.

Minard's Liniment Co., Limited. Gentlemen—Last winter I received great benefit from the use of MINARD'S LINIMENT in a severe attack of LaGrippe, and I have frequently proved it to be very effective in cases of inflammation. Yours, W. A. HUTCHINSON.

Gruesome Statistics.

(Acadian Recorder.)
 It seems inexplicable that the awful practise of lynching should exhibit such persistence in a highly civilized country like the United States. Yet nearly all the tragedies of this sort are confined to one section of the nation, although individual cases have occurred in other sections. An American journal recently stated that during the last thirty years 3,224 have been murdered by mobs. The North had 219 victims, the South 2,824, the West 156 and Alaska 15. Among the States Georgia leads with 386 victims, Missouri following 373. Then come Louisiana with 313, Alabama with 276, Arkansas with 214, Tennessee with 196, Florida with 178 and Kentucky with 169. The victims were not all one sex, for not less than 50 negro women and 11 white women were thus horribly murdered in 14 States. Of the States in which females were lynched thirteen were Southern States, the only non-Southern State being Nebraska.

During the last five years the North and West have lynched 21 persons and the South 304. Some years ago, President Wilson made an earnest and eloquent appeal to the Governors of the States to prevent lynching, but the appeal did not have much effect, for during the year 1918, sixty-three negroes, five of them women, and four white men fell victims to the murderous mobs and in no case was any member of a mob convicted in any court, and in only two instances were trials held, and these two were only trials in form and the culprits were acquitted. The explanation of all this is not easy to understand, particularly where some of the most respectable citizens of a locality take part. Some have blamed it on the defective administration of justice, the law's delays proving the mob's opportunity. Others trace it back to the feelings engendered during the Civil War; but unquestionably the enormous majority of the American people look upon lynching with horror and condemn it in unmeasured terms.

HIS STRIPES.
 "Some ancient phrases live marvelously."

When next you see, perhaps upon a shabby coat, the wound stripes of some ex-soldier, let these words "live marvelously" in your mind, for they do but say the truth:

"The chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed."
