It had Wings.

The popular biscuit and confectionery traveler, Mr. Jos. Wilcox, of London, tells this fish story. He states that whilst fishing through a hole in the ice at Pond Mills recently he hitched on to what appeared to be a gigantic sucker. With the aid of a companion he succeeded in landing this enormous specimen of the finny tribe, when, strange to say, after giving a few vigorous flaps, the fins of the monster suddenly developed into wings, and it flew away in a southerly direction. Not having a gun, Joe says he could not stop it. Were we not certain that Mr. W. is a gentleman of undoubted veracity, and that this is afish story, and backed up by a lay clergyman named Ambrose Clary, who states that while performing his duties of mail clerk on the St. Clair branch he saw the flying fish pass over in the vicinity of Melbourne, we would be inclined to doubt the above adventure.—[Alvinston Free Press.]

-Mr. Newton W. Rowell, of Toronto, the talented young barrister, is visiting relatives in the city.

-Yesterday being Good Friday the mass of the pre-sanctified was celebrated in St. Peter's Cathedral in the magning. Another sudden summons of a worthy citizen has painfully surprised the community. Mr. George Phillips, the well-known flour and feed dealer, is the latest to be called away without warning. He had suffered for some time with heart failure, and his general health was affected thereby. He was present at the dinner advertisement of Oak Hall, which will be especially interesting to gentlemen purchasing their spring suits.

George Primmer, the well-known Petrolea merchant, was the guest of Samuel Wilkins, South London, yesterday. He goes east to Courtland to-day.

—Miss Alexander, of Toronto, the distinguished elocutionist, who is so great a favorite in London and the West, is about to take a trip to the old world.

—Mr. Anderson, manager of the Bank of Montreal, leaves next week to assume his new position at Ottaws. Mr. Hogg, of Winnipeg, his successor, will arrive in a few days.

—John McCutcheon, brother of Robert McCutcheon, employed in the St. Thomas car wheel foundry, died in Toledo on Thursday. The remains were brought to London for interment.
