—In lighting the gas in the window of Miss Alley's millinery store, 193 Dundas street, about 6 o'clock Saturday evening, the curtain and other ornamental material became ignited and were soon in a blaze. Two or three passers-by rushed in, tore the contents out of the window and threw them into the street. This means, though rough, was probably effectual in preventing the destruction of the only remaining wooden buildings on Dundas street from Clarence to Ridout.

The Doctor was one of the few professional men that could converse in Latin as well as in Eaglish, and enjoyed nothing better than an opportunity of a Latin conversation. Since the establishment of the City Hospital here he held the honorary post of consulting surgeon in that institution. He refrained from accepting civil offices of any kind, and gave his life to the study and practice of his profession. He kept well posted on general subjects and was a pleasant conversationalist. For some years he was a director in the Dominion Savings and Loan Society and also in the City Gas Company; from both he retired on account of failing eyesight. He attended the Church of England and was a life member and one of the doctors of St. George's Society. In politics he was a Conservative. He leaves a wife, two daughters are Mrs. Isaac Waterman, of this city, and Mrs. (Dr.) F. B. Wilkinson, of Courtright, Ont.; the son, Dr. J. T. Cattermole, resides at West Flamboro.

INPORTANT QUESTIONS.

J. S. Pearce—I approve of the abolition of wards and the election of a reduced number of aldermen or Board of Commissioners. They should be appointed for a term of three years.

F. Hancock—I see no reason why the present system should not continue, providing the aldermen are good men, something they are not now.

A. Maguire—I think the number of aldermen should be reduced. The scheme of appointing two or three paid commissioners would be a good one.

George S. Birrell—I've been there five years myself, so you may say that I don't care to express an opinion.

Squire Jarvis—If good men were secured I think that a commission of paid men would be the best and cheapest board of managers that the city could have. The office should be elective, with a good salary.

Y., partner of the brokerage firm of Mills, Robeson & Smith, of 96 Broadway, is locked up at police headquarters on a charge of forgery amounting to $350,000. The forgeries cover a period of six years. Smith says he used the money to reimburse customers of the firm who had lost money on his suggestions. Before his arrest he made a clean breast of his doings to his associates in the firm. He is a prominent churchman, a member of several clubs, 45 years old and a childless widower.

Windsor, Ont., Nov. 17.—Gadbury, an Indiana business man, obtained a decree of divorce from his wife two months ago and was awarded the custody of their only child. Mrs. Gadbury secured the child surreptitiously and skipped to Windsor, where she has relatives. The father found a clue and followed, but the Canadian law protected the mother. On Saturday while she was in consultation with her solicitors the father and boy went out for a walk and kept it up until they reached Detroit. Mrs. Gadbury and her relations are searching in vain for the missing boy.
