Working Under an Agreement With Great Britain.

THE HAGUE, Oct. 4 .- Via London. -Since the recent agreement arrived at between Great Britain and Dutch mixed blood, comprising Turks, Rumanfishermen with regard to the shipment of fish, two thousand tons of Dutch salted herring have been shipped to he United States.

For some time, up to September 1 British warships had been taking pass the Danube within their own ter-Dutch fishing boats into English ports, catches was presumably destined for Germany. The operations of Dutch ishermen in the North Sea had virtually come to a standstill until Great Britain agreed with the Dutch fishing interests that their catches could b sold in the open market, provided that not more than twenty per cent of them should go to Germany. The agreement stipulated that twenty per cent of the remainder should be used for Dutch home consumption and at the prices ruling for Dutch buyers. agreed, could be disposed of to countries not at war with Great Britain.
