The Weekly Monitor.

The election which took place throughout the United States on Wednesday last, the 7th inst., resulted in one of the most extraordinary political revolutions the country has ever experienced. The republicans have carried everything, winring infinitely more than their most sanguine friends expected or dared hope for. Wilson, the father of the Wilson bill, is badly beaten in West Virginia, Hill is buried out of sight in New York, Tammany is annihilated, while a democratic majority of 100 in the present House of Representatives at Washington, is turned into a republican majority of over 150 in the next one. The present House consists of 218 democrats, 127 republicans and 11 independents. With the House, the democratic party has had control of all branches of the national government,—the people have once more consigned it to opposition, under circumstances which give promise of being kept there for a quarter of a century.

Painful Accidents.

A very serious and painful accident happened Mr. George E, eldest son of Mr. Jesse Hoyt, on Saturday evening last. While taking care of a colt he had decided to winter, he was unfortunate enough to trip and fall inear its heels, when it took to kicking with light ingeries of the blows landing directly on the nose and forent fall with example of the most unconscious for several moments. On partly recovering himself he managed to reach home, when Dr. deBlois was immediately sent for, and on arrival property stirched up the injured nose and dressed the other badly distigured portion of the face. The accident was serious one, and if after a fortnight's nursing "Ted" scapes with a life-mark, he can still consider himself quite fortunate.

Various causes are being assigned for this

Various causes are being assigned for this great political revolution. Ex-President Harrison claims the result solely as a victory for protection. "A vast majority of our people," he says, "believe in a protective tariff," but never so many and never so strongly as now." This, however, is a politician's way of looking at it, and is but partially true. While this verdict must be interpreted as an endorsement of the protective policy of the republican party, there was much in the contest just closed, beside the tariff issue, which helped to add be a continue, he will rank among our foremost turful farmers. In a business letter he writes:

Prompt action in dealing with the silver question, and in making the contemplated changes in the tariff, would have done much to avert the recent financial disasters through which the nation has been passing. That the party entrusted with the responsibility of governing the country should fritter away month after month in childish and unseemly squabbles, instead of dealing promptly with these great matters, incensed the people, and led them to meet out speedy and sure punish. led them to meet out speedy and sure punishment upon those who were believed to be largely responsible for much of the grouble. The result will probably put an end to the tariff reform agitation over there, and leave the protectionists masters of the situation the protectionists masters of the situation

-A BICYCLIST has asked us to call the attention of the public to the fact that the members of his fraternity have rights which the travelling public is bound to respect. He declares that about one half the public he meets never thinks of such a thing as turning out and giving the man on his wheel a part of the road, and that frequently, to the risk of accident, he is compelled to draw away out of the highway upon the edge of the ditch or gutter. This is a mistake on the part of the driver of teams. It has been decided by the courts that a man on a bicycle has the same rights under the law as a man in a carriage and is entitled to the same privileges. He can, therefore, claim a share of the road and hold the driver of the team responsible for any accident should he fail to get it. This does not, of course, hold good in tention of the public to the fact that the get it. This does not, of course, hold good in get it. This does not, of course, hold good in regard to sidewalks. Bicyclists have no right to be there, and pedestrians need not give way to him when there. Indeed, we presume the wheelman is liable to the same penalty as the driver of teams if he persists in riding apon sidewalks. In these times, when bicycles are becoming so numerous and are used, not as toys or playthings, but as adjuncts of business, it is well to bear these things in mind, and give the man on his wheel his share of the right of way. The bicyclist, therefore, must be given a chance. He has come among us to stay, and his rights must By's a strange principle of their legislative system the present members continue in office until March 4th, '95, while the House just elected will not meet till December, '95, unless an extra session is called at an earlier date. Thus the men who have met defeat at the polls still have the power of legislating for several months longer. After that time President Cleveland and his cabinet will have to deal with a Congress which is hostile to them in both branches.
