cooked upon a fire of coals beside these shores, that Jesus sought to convince his disciples of the reality of his resurrection. ly V We cease to wonder, therefore, that the figure of a fish became the secret symbol of the early Christians in those days of persecution which followed the ascension of Christ. Thus, in 'Quo Vadis,' the drawing of a fish in the sand is made a confession of Christ.

Standing upon these shores, or in a fisher's boat, Christ preached the 'sermons beside the sea.' Here also he spake many of the most beautiful parables that fell from his Pointing one day to a fisherman's boat that had just come to shore drawing a net filled with all kinds of fishes, as the net lay upon the shore, filled with its wriggling occupants, he said: 'The kingdom of heaven is likened unto the net which is cast into the sea and is gathered of every kind; which, when it was filled, they drew upon the beach; and they sat down and gathered the good into vessels, but the bad they cast So shall it be at the end of the away. Beside this sea he also wrought world.' many of his mightiest miracles; miracles in Capernaum, miracles at Gadara, miracles beyond the lake; and miracles upon its bosom. As we were crossing this lake in a fisherman's boat, a wind storm swept down upon us, dashing the water into the boat and drenching us to the skin. Some of our party were almost as terrified as were the disciples, but the Master was with us as he was with them, though we heard not his 'Peace, be still,' except with the ears of the

After spending a day and a night with our tents pitched upon the ruins of Capernaum, 'his own city,' we mounted our horses and started north for Damascus. Upon the summit of the rocky mountain that rises to the north, we drew rein and paused for a few moments that we might take our last look at that lake and the Holy Land. There it at that lake and the Holy Land. There it lay, smiling in the sunshine like a sleeping child, while the hills hung over it like guardians of rock. How marveilous has been the history of this sacred sheet of water. How often must Jesus return in memory and stead again upon its shores. If he is and stand again upon its shores. If he is indeed to come in bodily presence, as his disciples saw him go, surely there is no place on earth more likely to be blessed by his visit than,

'Galilee, blue Galilee, Where Jesus loved so much to be.'

The Judge Prayed All Night.

Canon Knox-Little once had Baron Pollock, the famous judge, as his guest, and he tells this remarkable and interesting incident of him:

He noticed in the morning that the judge looked pale and tired, and he remarked that the judge's work must be exhausting. He answered in words like these:

He answered in words like these:

'I have had to be up almost all night;
for to sentence some, especially the young
—young men and boys—is such an awful responsibility. You must think carefully what is right, what is best for their souls.
You need'—these are his exact words—'so much thought and prayer.'
