

rapidity in Flemish, which nobody near could understand. He became impatient and made signs that he wished to write, and on the necessary implements being brought to him, he wrote several lines in the same language. The curious part of it is that the man, though born near Antwerp, had lived in Paris for many years, and he was supposed to have forgotten Flemish altogether. The writing alluded to a debt of twelve shillings contracted twenty years before, and which, as was subsequently ascertained, was still unpaid. The other case was that of an ataxic patient also dying of phthisis. He had lost consciousness, and the pulse was hardly perceptible, when, after an injection of ether, he turned to his wife and exclaimed, "You won't find the pin, for the floor has been replaced;" an allusion to a trivial incident which had happened eighteen years before. Similar occurrences are by no means rare, and it would seem that the reminiscence is usual at death, and that its expression is facilitated by artificial stimulation.—Press and Circular.
