you can find on the continent! The once great W. H. H. Murray said of this river: "It is a monstrous cleft opened by earthquake violence for sixty miles, through a landscape of mountains formed of primeval rock.

In old times a shock which shook the world, burst the Laurentian range assunder at its St. Lawrence line, where Tadousac now is, and opened up a chasm two miles wide and two thousand feet in depth and sixty miles in length straight westward. Thus the Saguenay was born."
