Late Judge Burke Last Work at O. J. C.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.—Joseph J. Burke, one of the best known judges in the United States and Canada, who died at his residence, No. 409 Welling street, Richmond Hill, L.I., tomorrow, at the age of 74, was the result of a heart attack caught on the trip home from a visit to his daughter, Mrs. Burke, who was born in Portsmouth, Va., and came to New York when a youth, and obtained a position on a local newspaper as a compositor. When E. A. Buck, owner of the "World," purchased the paper, Burke was made editor of the paper.

that paper to fill the vacancy left by the death of Charles Foster. In the early eighties Burke was appointed clerk of the scales at the Brighton Beach track, and soon after was asked to act as judge. He was so efficient at placing horses that the Washington Park (Chicago) officials sent for him. When the Guttenberg track magnates started to oppose the Long Island tracks, they engaged Burke and J. F. Caldwell as judge and starter, respectively, giving them the highest salary ever paid race track officials. It proved a good business, for the racing fans followed Burke. In recent years "the Judge," as Burke was called, presided as steward at the local tracks, but during the last five years confined his efforts to placing horses on the Canadian tracks. His last official work was at Woodbine Park, Toronto.
