

- Double standard, 107.
 Dull times, nature of, 128, 164.
 Employers, function of, 73; profits of, see Profits; not responsible for low wages of women, 221; employer's cost, 92, 234, 260, 387.
 Exchange of products made necessary by division of labor, 22; obscured by use of money, 26; carried on by traders, 28; complicated with payment of wages, 33, 133, 139, 164, 238, 241; must keep pace with production, 88, 128; exchange between nations, 323.
 Exports, pay for imports, 325, and tend to equality with, 328.
 Free Trade and Protection, 349.
 Gold, nominal and real demand and supply of, 142; uses of, 143; has no price, 145; production of, 145; profits of gold-mining affected by changes of prices, 146; note; how the careful keeping of the precious metals affects their value, 147; questions between gold and silver, 166; gold standard, 170; movements of gold between countries, chap. xxv.
 Improvements in production, effect of on values, 106; on wages and profits, 107, 373; agricultural improvements, 301.
 Inconvertible notes, 182.
 Interest, 196, 250, 270.
 International trade, 323.
 Inventors, importance of, 71.
 Labor, as an element in cost of production, 65; cost of differs in different employers, 257; division of, 18; productive labor, 52; productiveness of, 54; non-productive labor, 53, 226, 320; prison labor, 218.
 Laborers, classes of, 214; may raise wages by increased efficiency, 233, 235, 371; not benefited by those who buy goods, 230; constitute a market for all they can produce, 238.
 Land, grades of, 41; rent of, 288; city rents, 300; why price of land so variable, 409.
 Legal tender notes, 154, 156; inconvertible, 183.
 Materials, a form of capital, 60.
 Money, the struggle for, 17; uses of, 25; value of, 122; circulation of, 124, 130; two functions of, 133; nominal and real demand and supply of, 127, 142; value of differs in different countries, 94, 329.
 Money-wages, 123, 198, 372; scale of important only in relation to prices, 34, 197, 235; differ in different countries, 336.