FLAX SHOULD BE GRADED. IMPURITIES A HANDICAP

Commission Will Find Out Whether Inspector or Act is at Fault.

The grain commission yesterday listened to further representations touching alleged defects in the present system of grain inspection and the act in general.

James Livingston, ex-M.P., flax mill owner, of Baden, explained that all western flaxseed had to pass thru Winnipeg and the export seed then went to Port Arthur or Fort William, where it was stored and reloaded and on being shipped east a certificate was given, but it did not set forth the amount of impurity. He had received the certified pure, the inspector or should do as at Winnipeg—test the seed and issue a certificate in accordance with the degree of purity found.

It appeared that certificates issued by Inspector Home certified that the seed was "commercially pure," and the question hinged upon whether seed, as intended, was to be absolutely free from foreign matter. Mr. Livingston claimed that it did, but the commission was dubious.

In reply to Mr. Goldie, who asked whether he accused Inspectors Horne and Gibbs of wrongfully grading the seed or whether the act was the common grade. He referred to Duluth, where from 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 bushels of flax were handled yearly, the bulk going for export. The flax certificates issued set forth the degree of purity, thereby creating a fixed standard. The foreign market demanded this standard, hence Canadian flax had no chance to compete.

"The whole trouble is in the act. If it were based on pure seed, the whole trouble would be over," suggested Mr. Goldie, but Mr. Livingston wasn't entirely convinced of this.

The commission promised to look into the grievance complained of, to see whether the flax was really the act itself or in a faulty interpretation by inspectors.

Complain of Shortages. Murray Brown of Alexander Brown Milling and Elevator Co., Toronto, complained of shortage in the grain as received, amounting on the average to 1-2 bushels in a thousand. The loss was about 1-2 cent per bushel. In cases where the cars arrived in an unusual condition claimants were met against the railways, and were met, but when cars arrived apparently sound, no such claims could be advanced.

Mr. Brown complained of impurities in wheat, No. 1 Northern having been delivered last season so full of impurity that it was on a par in value with No. 2 Northern.

W. M. Stark of Stark Bros. & Company, Toronto, grain broker, declared that millers almost invariably found shortages in wheat received from the elevators. The weighing was fairly satisfactory. He would not say that these shortages were intentional on the part of the elevators, against whom there was no course, such as might at times be had against the railways.

The chairman asked if the shortages were a more serious grievance than defects in the grading, and Mr. Stark replied that the inspector was responsible for any errors in the grading.

Mr. McNair asked what suggestions, weighing he had to offer, and Mr. Stark gave the opinion that the weighers were not sufficiently responsible. There should be a superintendent to have control over them, having nothing else to do than to check the weights were properly made.

Mr. Stark cited a case where samples of No. 1 Northern grain averaging 68, had been sent to his office on an elevator at Point Edward. When returned to the grain was found to average from 62 to 65. There was no redress, and a loss of $400 had to be recorded. Mr. Stark's impression was that the wheat received was intended for another consignment.

Secretary E. W. Watts of the Dominion Millers' Association argued during a mass of correspondence being sent upon the representations made by that body before the railway commission and the agricultural committee of the house of commons. Mr. Watts reiterated that the reason why the eastern grain men did not buy their wheat direct from the Manitoba farmers, and have elevators of their own there, was that they would be crushed by the big elevator monopoly in Manitoba.

KEEP STEP WITH THE WEATHER

Fall is here, bringing with it crisp, quick-stop air, energy and a change in fashion. A man who is up-to-date in business should be up-to-date in his clothing. Odd trousers, in English worsted, "beat out in the world," the clothing man says, $3 to $5. In suits we claim to have about the nicest ever put on our counters. We have the body-fitting and hip flares in the most artistic lines, $15 to $25. The overcoats, too, come in for a share of praise—$15 to $25.

In fancy vests we carry a full new line. Men who want patterns in fine fabrics that are far away from and above the ordinary vest pattern should consider a visit to our Fall vest counter a treat. Dress vests in pique, Marseilles and silk; new 6-button styles in flannel and other appropriate fabrics, $2 to $5.

Shirts order in an autumn requisite. The old white bosom shirts are not sleek enough for dress occasions. We make beautiful white dress shirts, beautiful in the lines quality, in the stitching and in the fit, too. We make a very fine one to order for $2.50.

There's one thing you must bear in mind—just because we claim superior quality in our goods does not mean we add nothing to the price. No one can give bigger value for like money.

RECCOMBE-MCKENDRY

One of the prettiest weddings of the season was celebrated yesterday afternoon in Sherbourne-street Methodist Church, at 3 o'clock, when Miss Margaret McKendry, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. N. McKendry, was united in marriage with Dr. Wallace Secombe. The church was handsomely decorated with palms, ferns and cut flowers. Mr. Blakey presided at the organ, officiating ministers were the Rev. R. F. Bowles and Rev. Geo. Jackson. The groom was supported by Mr. Lorne Sinclair, whilst Miss Kathryn Lear, cousin of the bride, acted as maid of honor. The bridesmaids were Miss Alice Ogden and Miss Nora Hamilton, and the flower girls, Miss Minnie Laughlin, Misses Will Ogden, Fred Hanson of Montreal, Wallace Beazley and Miss Mary were the ushers. To the strains of Lohengrin's beautiful wedding march the bride entered the church on the arm of her father, preceded by the ushers and the bridesmaids, the maid of honor and the flower girl. At the altar waiting for them were the groom and best man. At the close of the ceremony, and whilst the bridal party were in the vestry signing the register, Miss Best Beloved" was sweetly rendered by Miss Irene Hanson on an old college guitar of the bride. The bride was crowned in handsome and embroidered chiffon and guipure lace hand insertion over duchess satin. Over all, reaching almost to the hem of the court train, was worn a silk tulle veil, with a small coronet of orange blossoms. A pearl necklace and a pearl and diamond cluster ring, gifts of the groom, were also worn. A magnificent bunch of white roses gave the finishing touch to an uncommonly beautiful bridal costume.

The bride's attendants were all gowned in exquisitely pretty costumes of the palest shade of blue crepe de Paris, with Gainsboro hats or velvet in the same shade, trimmed with American beauty roses, which circled the crowns of the hats, and drooped at the back over the hair. Each carried a beautiful bouquet of dark red roses, which looked exceedingly pretty against the pale blue background of the gowns.

The groom's gifts to the bride's attendants were rings, composed of a circle of whole pearls, the ushers receiving scarlet pins of the same design.

Mrs. McKendry, the bride's mother, was gowned in black chiffon velvet, with hat of black and white, trimmed with a large mount of bird or paradise, osprey. Mrs. Secombe, the groom's mother, wore a gown of black silk, trimmed with white and red.

After the ceremony guests to the number of 200, were received by the bride's father and mother and the bride and groom at 284 Sherbourne-street, the family residence. The scheme of the church decorations was carried out at the home. Refreshments were served in a large marquee erected on the lawn. Music was provided by a string orchestra. The numerous and beautiful gifts to the bride, together with the crowded church, testified to the bride's popularity, and congratulatory telegrams and cablegrams were received from many places throughout Canada, the United States and Great Britain.

Dr. and Mrs. Secombe left for the east on the 5:20 train, amidst a shower of confetti rained upon them as they ran the gauntlet of their friends assembled to see them off.
