

SPLENDID TRIBUTE TO HON. MR. FISHER

Stirring Speech of Agricultural Minister Before Montreal Reform Club.

Montreal, Jan. 28.—The banquet tendered the Hon. Mr. Fisher, Dominion Minister of Agriculture, by the Reform Club of this city, was a splendid tribute to the achievements of the guest, and the policy of the Liberal administration.

Greeted With Cheers. A scene of great enthusiasm followed when Mr. Fisher rose to speak. The whole assembly rose and stood for several minutes, while the cheering voices could be heard insisting inquiring "What's the matter with Stanstead?" The cheering had died down and Mr. Fisher was about to begin when somebody exclaimed "Hurrah for the Eastern Townships," and it was quite a little while longer before the minister succeeded in getting started.

Mr. Fisher said that if he had been able to do anything in his public career, to do anything for the progress of Canada by legislation or administration, he was proud of it, and especially proud of what little he might have been able to accomplish in the interest of the farmers of Canada. He did not wish to dwell on the details of that administration or legislation, but if there was anything in his public career upon which he felt entitled to congratulate himself it was the status which, under the regime of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, agriculture had assumed in the business of the Dominion of Canada. (Applause.) He did not think that he was wrong in saying that as a result of choosing a farmer as minister of agriculture the occupation had assumed a new position in our land. That was an encouragement to work for the interest of the great farming population, because it showed that the Prime Minister was alive to the great importance of doing all that was possible for its development. Mr. Fisher declared that if in his public administration he had been able to do anything on behalf of the farmer it had been due to the heartfelt sympathy of his colleagues and the ample support he had received from the party in the House of Commons and the country. Many laws had been passed for the benefit of agriculture in Canada and in this work the Government had had the hearty, unanimous support of the whole Liberal party. The result was such as must be gratifying to all concerned, since it had placed the agricultural development of Canada amongst the foremost in the world. (Applause.)

Although he was known as minister of agriculture, Mr. Fisher reminded his hearers that they must leave out of consideration the other branches of government which were under the charge of that department. Several of these branches were of great importance. It had been, for instance, his good fortune to be able to pass a copyright law in Canada, by which the interests of the writers and publishers of Great Britain as well as Canada had been harmonized. There was also the important branch which was known as the archives, and in this department great steps in advance had been taken. A new system of handling the historical records of the country had been adopted and today the archives were housed in a building worthy of their importance, a building where they would be well preserved for the use of the future. A third branch which had been developed was that of the statistical bureau, by which it had been rendered possible for the people of Canada to secure adequate statistical information up to date, instead of being compelled to wait for the census, as was necessary under the old system.

Laurier Chosen Leader. As he looked back on his twenty-five years of public life there were two events with which he felt proud to have been connected. The first was an incident that pertained to the walls of Parliament. In 1877, when he was one of a small band in the House of Commons to go back to that House after a severe contest and a severe reverse, it fell to him to choose a new leader. If there was one event to which he looked back with gratification and pride it was that he was one of the men who, in 1877, chose Sir Wilfrid Laurier. (Cheers.) It is true they did not realize what the career of that great statesman was to be in the years that were to follow, but they did appreciate his sterling worth and proved character, and they did appreciate the purity of his public life. Thoroughly appreciated, too, were his splendid eloquence and his faculty of laying before the people the principles which the Liberal party stands for.

There was another event a few years later which Mr. Fisher declared he looked back upon with much gratification, and that was in 1894, when Sir Wilfrid Laurier made the first trip of a Liberal leader to the great Northwest. Mr. Fisher was one of those who were honored by an invitation to take the trip. It was three months of strenuous work, extending all the way to the Pacific Ocean. For the first time in the history of Canada that great portion of our country became aware of Liberal principles and of the Liberal leaders. The result was what might have been expected, though it seemed afterwards to have been a surprise to their political opponents. The result was that in 1896 that section of the country gave to the Liberal party a magnificent majority, although before the trip it was solidly Conservative. (Applause.) That trip was the awakening of the country to Liberal principles, and was the direct precursor of victory all over Canada.

Managing Our Affairs. In relation to the outside world, the people of Canada were today in the enjoyment of the advantages of being able to deal with their foreign relations practically by their own representatives. In 1877 Sir Alexander Gait was appointed to be the representative of the empire in connection with the fisheries award. Since that time steady progress had been made in the same direction. He would not go into the details of that progress, but he felt that he could refer with great satisfaction to the fact that a few months ago two Canadian ministers negotiated entirely by themselves a commercial treaty with France, a most satisfactory and advantageous treaty. Indeed, Mr. Fisher also referred to the recent journey of Mr. Lemieux to Japan, from which country he had brought back an arrangement which was honorable to Canada and which at the same time preserved the sensibilities and the pride of the great nation with which Canada was dealing.

This result, he said, must be attributed to the tact and diplomacy of Mr. Lemieux. Mr. Fisher declared that, in his opinion, if there was one reform which was necessary in Canada today, it was a reform in the country's educational system. The system ought to be such that young people ought to be able to grow up efficient workers and thorough in the work of their lives. This result could be attained only by proper training and discipline. He had no sympathy with the nobby pamper idea which prevailed amongst educationalists that the child must be amused at school and never allowed to tire. That was not the way to bring up men who could do capable and continued work. The question of education was one which, in his opinion, required the attention of the Governor-General to commemorate the occasion by establishing as public parks the sites where the battles were fought that decided the fate of Canada.

Mr. Fisher, in conclusion, said that the Liberal party had tried to do their duty in the play, and that the people had put them through their record and their work were before the public, and it had been indorsed time and again. He believed that in the future the Liberal Government might rest their case with confidence, in the hands of their fellow-countrymen.

ADELE RITCHIE AT THE GRAND

Played To a Large Audience in "Fascinating Flora" Last Night.

"Fascinating Flora," was the attraction at the Grand last evening, and the fact that Adele Ritchie was to play the leading role was sufficient to draw a very large audience. Opinion as to the merits of the play is divided, but it must be classed as good, if not better than the average run of musical melanges that have come this way.

Now a word about Adele. She has been heralded as "The Dresden China Girl," and sure, was as dainty and pretty a little maiden as has graced the stage in this city in a long time. She is a nice bit of china—not hand-decorated—that would not be gallant. She dances gracefully, and has such pretty gowns, and a bunch of diamonds, and a smile—and "them" eyes. But that just about lets Adele out. Of course that would be sufficient, to cause notice, and about as much as the average woman gets out of life, or anything else, and is also sufficient to get her mixed up matrimonially with the best fellows. Adele is not there, "my child." Her voice is poor, but she gets away with it more or less. Still, Adele is pretty and refreshing, and it is rather a good thing she came this way. Her songs are "I'd Rather Two-Step Than Waltz, Bill," and "Captain Jack Brown."

There were a couple of young ladies in the piece, however, that showed some real acting ability. Miss Sadie Jansell gave a series of imitations of Hattie Williams, Anna Held and Eddie Fox, that were really good, and classed Miss Jansell among the list of successful imitators.

The only real bit of character work in the whole show was that of Ada Lewis as Winnie Wiggles. She was funny, and is a "Rube" maiden with a voice all to the merrily, as she would say.

There were several other girls in the show—quite a consoling. They might be roughly divided into two classes—lookers and workers. The former included a number of large girls advertised as American girls. So far as could be judged their chief vocation seemed to be to wear "Rube" gowns and look nice. All of which they did well, especially two of them. The little girls were workers. They hustled from curtain to curtain—not that it made much difference to the show, but pay day was coming and they must needs work. They did.

There were some men in the show—mark the word, men. Their chief aim in life so far as could be judged was to wear lavender clothes, and be back-grounds for smiles. It might safely be said that they played the only real role in the show—not intentional. Once they were garbed to represent a real bunch of college football players. That outfit could not be center runners in a cooking school team, and when one got a look at them, he laughed. One must not forget the plot of the play. It included many characters—and others who had characters.

The heroine, which was Miss Ritchie, was married to a musician, whom she endeavored to support in the style he was accustomed to before he left home. In the meantime she became tired of him, and was anxious to marry a fat millionaire whose money was tied up in watered stock. Well, in the going from love back to love, there were many interesting situations, in which a German music-maker made much amusement. There was an "angel" also in the play, a baron, which is the wrong viewpoint, as American heiresses seem largely to be angels. This interesting plot leads them into a broker's office where many ladies in abbreviated clothes are buying stocks with much laughter and song.

The shop is in the keeping of a nice tenor man, who seemed as much in place in the role as an actor in a prize fight. Well, it all ends by Miss Ritchie—in the play—retaining the affections of her singer, and greeting the fat millionaire with laughter. Everybody is married and rich when the bells toll.

James E. Sullivan, as Prof. Wagner, the German musician, is a capable comedian, and made the best of his opportunities. Frank Rushworth sang a couple of songs fairly well.

NEW SOLICITOR-GENERAL

THE DEAD FRENCH PRELATE

Immense Concours To Attend the Funeral of Cardinal Richard.

Paris, Jan. 29.—The remains of the late Cardinal Richard, archbishop of Paris, who died yesterday, lay in state all day today at the archbishopric and were viewed by about 5,000 people. The scene was an impressive one. The body of the dead prelate was clad in his sacerdotal vestments, with a white mitre in his hand.

It rested on a bier surrounded by lighted candles, while at one side a number of nuns were on their knees in prayer.

The Government has made no attempt to interfere with the imposing funeral and processions, which have been arranged for Saturday. All the eminent prelates of France, the clergy of Paris, the senators, deputies, and members of the municipal council, as well as the faithful generally, have been invited to participate in the procession from the archbishopric to Notre Dame Cathedral, and a Roman Catholic demonstration is expected.

PRIEST PROVES EARTH'S ROTATION

Father Guicheteau Succeeds in Fixing Exact Deviation at New York.

New York, Jan. 28.—An interesting and important scientific experiment was conducted yesterday afternoon by an eminent astronomer, who is an equally eminent priest of the Catholic Church. The result was the absolute determination of the hourly movement of the earth on its axis with relation to the latitude of New York.

The "Foucault Experiment," as it is known to scientists, was first conducted by the famous astronomer of that name at his observatory in Paris in 1851. Foucault was interrupted in his work by the French coup d'etat, and his death prevented the completion of his research. Since then the experiment has been performed by Camille Flammarion, the French astronomer, who thereby determined to a mathematical nicety the rotation of the earth at the meridian of Paris.

Father Guicheteau conducted the experiment yesterday for the first time in America. He is an intimate friend of Camille Flammarion, and often has gone to France to meet with him. The French astronomer, who thereby determined to a mathematical nicety the rotation of the earth at the meridian of Paris.

Father Guicheteau is a leader of the house of that society at No. 129 West Twenty-fourth street. He has been in the United States nearly 40 years.

The "Foucault Experiment" was performed yesterday in the rotunda of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, at Broadway and Aberdeen street in Brooklyn. The Rev. Father H. E. Purdie, the pastor, participated in the experiment, together with a few friends.

A plane wire was dropped from the ceiling, 30 feet above. To the end of the wire was attached a ten-pound weight, a counterpart of a modern steel armor-piercing shell. The weight was placed in a wooden square, upon which was marked a circle, divided into areas of ten degrees each, extending from the North Pole to the equator.

The pendulum being stationary when the experiment was begun, it was the purpose to prove that the earth was swinging on its axis, and also to show exactly how much this swing amounted to at the latitude in which the experiment was conducted.

Father Guicheteau brought the long pendulum to a perfect standstill immediately above the center of the disk on which the circle and angles were marked. He then attached a thread to the weight, tying the other end to a stationary post immediately in line with the equatorial line of the circle and angles. The thread, which was about twelve inches, thus, parenthetically, is the exact duplicate of Foucault's original experiment.

The pendulum swung from its lofty attachment it was noticed that it left the equatorial line and began to swing away to the east and west. At the end of one hour it had attained a distance of 3 minutes 47 seconds from its original position along the equator.

The pendulum swung four hours before it stopped.

BETTER BUY IN BRITAIN

Canadian Want of Success in Ship-building Commented On.

London, Jan. 29.—The Yorkshire Post, referring to a letter from the Ottawa correspondent describing the depression in the Canadian ship-building industry, in which the Canadian ship-builders are unable to compete with the British, says: "It is remarkable, that in spite of bounties, the attempt to establish shipbuilding in Canada has not succeeded, so that there is likelihood of an immediate demand for 'protection' against British built ships. Canada would be far better off had she bought her vessels in this country."

THE "ACTORS" BANK FAILS

Big Broadway Institution Closed by the State Comptroller of Currency.

New York, Jan. 28.—A notice was posted on the doors of the New Amsterdam National Bank, at thirty-ninth street and Broadway, tonight that the institution had been closed by the order of the comptroller of the currency and a National Bank examiner.

The New Amsterdam Bank is known as the Theatrical People's Bank, and it is here that the members of that profession have been in the habit of depositing their savings.

Managers and stars, down to the humble chorus girls, have made this their bank, and the savings, big and little, to tide them against the hard summer months may be wiped away.

Failure in Hamilton Hospital

Full Particulars now Given to the Public

The case of Mr. Jesse Munro, of 373 John street, is attracting considerable attention. For more than three years he has been in the hospital, and has been treated by the best medical advice and skill available.

"About three years ago," says Mr. Munro, "I began to notice my health breaking up. I became reduced to an extremely wretched condition. Loss of flesh and appetite, a nauseous sensation in the stomach, extreme nervousness and rush of blood to the head were manifest symptoms. Finally I grew too weak to take exercise, and went into the hospital. The doctors wanted to treat me with arsenic, but I was unwilling. I left the hospital and tried a number of the city physicians during the next two years, without benefit. I lost faith in the doctors, and tried a box of Ferrozone, which gave such encouraging results that I took more."

"After nine boxes of Ferrozone had been used, I was again on my feet and able to walk around. I kept on taking it for many weeks, and was restored to excellent health. Although I was formerly as weak as an infant, I am now put in a long hard day's work. My cure therefore is permanent. I am glad to add my grateful testimony along with many others, and can recommend Ferrozone to everyone who is bothered with weakness, nervousness or stomach trouble. I believe Ferrozone will cure after all else has failed."

We advise our readers to give Ferrozone a trial next time they require a bracing invigorating tonic.

A Businessman's Lunch

Drowsiness after the mid-day lunch is very common among businessmen who go in for a heavy lunch.

CZAR STARTS SUIT IN CANADA

Winnipeg, Jan. 29.—One of the most extraordinary lawsuits that has been instituted in Manitoba has been commenced in the provincial court in Winnipeg. The plaintiff is a man at whose name 140,000 persons tremble, for he is no less personage than the Czar.

The alleged faithless steward of the Czar is Stefan Proskurekoff, and with him is a woman of high degree, Anna Zoman by name. The two hall from Tashkent, the largest city of Central Asia. The errand couple have, since their arrival here, been fitting themselves out for the department of the interior of the Russian Government in the Province of Turkistan. During his tenure of office there he received sums amounting to 240 roubles and over $160,000, and stole or embezzled and appropriated the money for his own use.

Referring to the absconder the statement says: "The defendant, Proskurekoff, who passes under the assumed name of Stefan Ludkorffas, was formerly treasurer for the department of the interior of the Russian Government in the Province of Turkistan. During his tenure of office there he received sums amounting to 240 roubles and over $160,000, and stole or embezzled and appropriated the money for his own use."

J. E. O'Connor is acting for the Czar.

5,000 WOMEN TO PARADE

Demonstration Is Intended as Protest for Inability to Vote.

New York, Jan. 29.—Five thousand women, representing society and the workers, will parade on foot through the city streets next week to protest against the exclusion of the gentle sex from the ranks of voters.

This was announced today by Mrs. B. Borman Wells, the English suffragette, who is leading open air meetings to inveigle men to uphold the cause of the would-be women voters.

After a street corner meeting this afternoon a score of prominent suffrage leaders, headed by Mrs. Wells, met in the hotel Westminster and discussed plans for the big parade.

Mrs. Wells said that deputies tomorrow would begin to canvass women's organizations in the city to secure representatives. She said that she hoped to have at least 5,000 women in line.

GOING TO SUPREME COURT

Temperance Folk Make New Move in Saltfleet Local Option Fight.

Hamilton, Jan. 29.—Although Judge Snider has not yet handed down his judgment in the Saltfleet local option case, the temperance people have made another move. Anticipating that the judgment will be that the bylaw was defeated, they have instructed George S. Kerr, K. C., to appeal and if necessary carry the case to the supreme court in order to make a test of it. The point in dispute is whether or not the judge, in making the scrutiny of the ballots, had any right to decide as to the qualification of voters, and throw out the ballots cast by the deputy returning officers, poll clerks and constables. The Central Temperance Association of Toronto is behind the Saltfleet people in their fight.

Invalid Ladies

This Is For You.

There are thousands of females who suffer untold miseries common to their sex. This is largely due to the peculiar habits of life and fashion, and the improper training of girlhood. Then, too, the physical changes that mark the three eras of womanhood (the maiden, the wife, and the mother) have much to do with her sufferings, most of which are endured in silence, unknown by even the family physician and most intimate friends.

To all such whose hollow cheeks, pale faces, sunken eyes, feeble footsteps, indicate nervousness, palpitation of the heart, weak, faint, and dizzy spells, we would earnestly recommend a course of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. Jos. Sharp, Brighton, Ont., writes: "I was troubled with palpitation of the heart, weak spells and nervous trouble, and found no relief until advised to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills. I got one box and that helped me so much I sent and got five more. I am now cured completely."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. per box or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.
