

NOVEL SCHEMES FOR DELIVERY OF DRUGS TO ADDICTS

London, Sept. 4.—(A. P. by mail).—Scotland Yard is conducting an intensive campaign against West End drug traffickers whose activities of late are said to have greatly increased. Some of the methods used in delivering drugs to the purchaser are described in a recent report.

"Fourth lamp-post on the right," a trafficker whispers in the ear of a cocaine victim. He passes down the street, and with the aid of chewing gum fixes a little white packet on the fourth lamp-post. The purchaser follows at a discreet distance and removes the packet.

Another trafficker drops rolled omnibus tickets on the pavement. He is followed by a string of addicts who pick up the tickets, which contain cocaine.

Another throws an apparently empty match box into the gutter. A minute or so later a customer picks it up and extracts one or more packets of cocaine.

Another trafficker keeps the drug in the turned-up ends of his trousers. He advises his customers where he will walk, and as he goes along he stops as if to fasten his bootlace. In reality he is placing a packet of cocaine on a doorstep, whence a customer picks it up.

BOURGEOIS DRIVE REAL ARTISTS OUT OF GREENWICH

Migration to Roofs of Manhattan Waterfront Warehouses Planned—Studio Rents Forced Up.

New York, Sept. 22.—Artists are planning to desert Greenwich Village and migrate to warehouse roofs along the Manhattan waterfront, according to Julian Boyer, chairman of the rent committee of the American League of Artists, Inc., who has called a meeting of artists and real estate men to arrange for wholesale studio buildings on the Hudson and East rivers.

Such a move is necessary to escape from immoral, bottlegging and dilapidated neighbors, who have forced up the rents in the Greenwich Village and other artistic sections, according to Mr. Boyer and other artists. Studio rents have been multiplied chiefly, it is alleged, by the competition of bourgeois people who know nothing of art, but like to wear flowing ties and live in the midst of temptations.

New York is being destroyed as an art centre by the usurpation of studios, and the dispossession of artists, according to Frederick K. Dewiller, a well-known painter, who has a studio in Carnegie.

"Young artists are being forced out of the city by hundreds," he said. "The coming generation of American painters are to be found today on the farms where they can live cheaply and use the barns for studios. New York is now an art grave as far as domestic art is concerned. It is the most chiefly for imported works of art. American artists are being driven out of contact with their markets. The struggling young man is finding it more and more difficult to get a foothold in New York city. He has a hard time keeping in touch with his market from a farm in New Jersey, Connecticut, or Long Island."

If it keeps on, art will become strictly a rich man's game. A young fellow without capital to back him won't be able to get started. He can't pay the studio rents in New York city, because of the thousands of people in other walks of life, who are taking the studios, either because they are cheaper, or because they can be furnished easily, or because they want to live in a section that has the reputation of being artistic. I don't care to discuss the encroachments of immoral people, because that has already been fully set forth.

Ever since Maurier wrote Trilby or before that, it has been a fad among thousands of people to make excursions to studios to watch the way artists live. "Bobbed hair and smoking among women are both the immediate results of this mania of non-artists for peering into the studio life and imitating it. The outsiders found that women artists and models smoked and they took it up. The model was the first to bob her hair and millions have followed suit. Bobbed hair was strictly a matter of utility with the model. When she applied for employment, she needed to be able to whisk off her costume and whisk it on again, without the bother of disarranging and fixing her hair. What was for her a matter of business efficiency was taken up everywhere by women who seem to think there is something intrinsically artistic about it."

SURGEON GETS NEEDLE NEAR BOY'S HEART

Operation Saves the Life of a Young Ethical Culture Scholarship Student.

New York, Sept. 22.—Saved from death by an operation in which a part of a needle was removed from the pleural cavity, a half's width from the heart, William Constable, 12 years old, of 848 West Forty-ninth street, a special scholarship student of the Ethical Culture School, was discharged as cured from Roosevelt Hospital. The lad, a great favorite in the vicinity of his home, where he is known as "Dimples Willie," also had endeared himself to the nurses of the hospital, where he had been a patient since Sept. 6, and was showered with kisses when he started home yesterday, accompanied by his mother, Eleanor, the widow of a painter.

On Sept. 6 the boy was on his way home with some chums on an auto truck, a driver having given them a lift. In alighting a needle which William had picked up on the street, planning to take it home to his mother, became imbedded in his stomach. He was unable to stand up when he reached the ground and his chums hailed a passing automobile and took the boy to a hospital. He was admitted to Roosevelt Hospital and the next day the operation to remove the greater part of the needle was performed under the direction of Dr. Henry W. Cavonne, 61 East Fifth street.

William, who is one of five children and is regarded as a sort of child prodigy, got his Ethical Culture School scholarship through a competitive contest held at Columbia University. He hopes to be an electrical engineer when he grows up.

The outlook was rather dark while he was in the hospital, for the operation necessitated the "vol-lap" of one of his lungs, and he was obliged to breathe through one lung during the period of convalescence. When he was discharged, however, both his lungs were functioning correctly and he seemed none the worse for his experience.

SUBMARINE CABLE NOT SUPERSEDED

Companies, Undeterred by Wireless Competition, Lay New Lines.

London, Aug. 30.—(By Mail).—Submarine cabling is not in danger of being superseded by wireless transmission, it is one may judge from the activities of cable companies since the armistice. One European company has laid over 28,000 miles of ocean cable in the last three years, and it is believed that American companies have done as much in other parts of the sea.

Today the world is encircled by 225,000 miles of electrified ropes that carry messages from man to man. Fifty years ago there were only 8,000 nautical miles of cable. On the modern routes duplicate, triplicate and even sextuplicate cables are provided, and the entire system is linked up by alternatives and circuitous lines, so that if interruption occurs on one artery another may be quickly pressed into use. Land lines that link these ocean cables into one vast network constitute the nervous system of the civilized world. There is hardly any spot on the habitable globe which cannot be reached by a message over this great arterial system.

With the amazing development and perfection of wireless as a means of dispatching the world's thought, it was believed at one time that the submarine cable soon would become obsolete; but the fact is that the business of the ocean telegraph companies has increased by leaps and bounds until today there are scarcely sufficient cables to carry the enormous volume of messages daily sent across the Five Oceans.

HER ART FAILED HER; FINE OR JAIL TERM

London, Sept. 22.—Because her art failed her when she most needed it, Mary Mitchell, pretty little gypsy teller, was fined $500 and costs or six months in jail for stealing a lone dollar bill from a local police officer.

A plain clothes officer visited the girl's fortune-telling booth, and although she read his palm at considerable length, she failed to see the crossed bills plainly set forth.

Later on in the ceremony she borrowed his money and placed it in mystic form across his breast. The bills were returned and when the officer examined the marked roll on leaving the tent he found that one bill had been neatly extracted.
