WAS PROMINENT IN THE LIFE OF BOSTON

Former Mayor Quincy, Who Died Few Days Ago—Three of His Name and Family to Fill Mayor's Chair.

Josiah Quincy, former mayor of Boston, whose death was announced in the Times on Wednesday, was one of a long line of a family illustrious in the annals of the nation, state and city. He was sixth to bear the name, and the third of that name and family to serve as mayor of Boston. A Josiah Quincy has been mayor of Boston three times, first from 1823 to 1829; second, from 1846 to 1849; and lastly from 1896 to 1900.

Mr. Quincy was born at the Quincy homestead in Quincy, Oct. 15, 1809, son of Josiah Phillips Quincy and Helen B. (Huntington) Quincy. He attended Harvard College and graduated in 1830, a classmate of the late President Roosevelt.

After graduating from college he taught school at Adams Academy, in Quincy, an old endowed school for college preparation. After a year of letters, he went to Harvard Law School and was admitted to the Suffolk county bar in 1834.

His First Public Office.
Mr. Quincy's first public office was that of representative in the state legislature to which he was elected in 1837. He served there in 1838, 1839 and 1841, and the latter term was acknowledged house leader of the Massachusetts Democrats.

Mr. Quincy was one of the pioneers in seeking to improve the conditions of the worker. Many important measures owe their passage to him. He was active in a number of civic movements, notably that of the Civil Service Reform League, of which he was secretary in 1881. He was secretary of the Tariff Reform League in 1882 and was one of the most aggressive Democratic fighters during the tariff issues of the succeeding decade.

Perhaps the most important labor measure fathered by Mr. Quincy in Massachusetts was the act passed in 1888 which fixed the age limits at which children should be employed, provided proper hours for schooling, prevented their employment at unhealthy tasks, and made careful provision for compulsory school attendance.

In 1890 Mr. Quincy became secretary of the Democratic state executive committee, later serving as its chairman, and he was Massachusetts member of the Democratic national committee. He was one of the organizers and first president of the Young Men's Democratic Club. President Cleveland named Mr. Quincy assistant secretary of state in 1893, but he resigned after six months to take charge of the state Democratic campaign. In 1900 Mr. Quincy retired from public office, after serving two years as mayor of Boston and sailing for Europe. Feb. 17, 1900, he married

Mrs. Ellen Tyler, widow of William R. Tyler, in London. After a wedding tour of Egypt and the Orient, they returned to Boston. Mrs. Quincy died Jan. 17, 1904, leaving one son, Edmund.

Nov. 1, 1905, he married Miss Mary Honey, daughter of Hon. Samuel R. Honey of Newport, R. I. The following year he was appointed to the Boston Transit Commission. When that commission became defunct, he was made chairman of the municipal transit department.

Achieved Many Important Works.
In his two terms as mayor of Boston, Mr. Quincy achieved many important works. Both the South station and the old Subway bear his name and he was one of the first agitators for the extension of the banks of the Charles River and their development into the esplanade. He was instrumental in forming the Boston Society of Municipal Officers, and he organized the city printing office and department of electrical construction.

Under Mr. Quincy's regime, the all-year-round bath at Dover street was opened. Two city playgrounds and several gymnasiums were provided by him in various parts of the city. His knowledge of chemistry led to the establishment of a bacteriological laboratory under the board of health and to a thorough reform in the culinary department of public institutions.

First Woman to Run For Federal House in Carleton-Victoria Contest

Mrs. Minnie Bell Adney, music teacher, and a daughter of the founder of the famous Sharpe orchard and nurseries near Woodstock (N. B.), announces herself as a candidate in the coming federal by-election in Carleton-Victoria.

Mrs. Adney's card, published in the Carleton county papers, says she will support the Union government but stands for reduction of the cost of living and eradication of corruption and profiteering from Canadian public life, besides a fuller measure of recompense for returned men—"something dignified and worthy of the great Canada that sent them forth, speaking in terms of their material advancement and prosperity and keeping the pact with those that sleep in Flanders Fields, the saviors of the world," says the card.

RECENT DEATHS

Mrs. John Kingston, sr., passed away on Saturday at the Hotel Dieu, Chatham. Her home was in Newcastle and she is survived by her husband, three sons, three daughters, one brother and one sister.

The death of Elmer A. Brown occurred yesterday at his residence, "Johnsoncroft," near Brown's Flats. He was a popular farmer and lumberman in that district and is survived by his parents, his wife, two sons, one daughter, two brothers and two sisters.

Halting opposite the French restaurant which he was wont to patronize he invited his friend to dine with him. "You know," he said "this place is famous for its horse meat. You'll find it a regular treat."
"Horse meat?" exclaimed the friend in alarm. "Wouldn't touch it if I was paid, especially after what happened to poor Duggie."
"Why, what about him?" he was asked.
"Choked to death in a hotel the other day," answered the friend. "He was eating a piece of horse meat when some one said 'Wash!'"
