EVANGELISTIC.

A deeper interest is being taken in the revival services in Queen's Rink. Many persons are being brought into closer relationship with God, and many are for the first time accepting the teachings of the Gospel and surrendering themselves to Jesus as their Lord and Master. The chorus choir has steadily grown in numbers and in efficiency. Last evening Rev. Dr. Heine opened the service with prayer and after a solo by Lieut. Milne of the Salvation Army, Doctor Burrows preached from the text Ezek. xxiv. 16. The sermon was a sharp criticism of ministers and pastors who allow their members to get away from God because of their own indifference. Several blows were aimed at the worldly church member whose influence, instead of drawing people into the kingdom keeps them out, and furthermore drives away those already in. Also was given a tender presentation of Christ seeking the lost and broken spirited.

the souls of men, forgetting that they had bodies. Now, coincident with the movement in all public institutions to get a more intimate relation with the lives of the people they deal with, the churches have rediscovered human nature.

This was the statement made to the general assembly of the Presbyterian churches in the United States (Southern and Western) in session here, by the Rev. J. S. Lyons of Louisville, Ky., as a preface to the introduction of a report of the joint committee of the Presbyterian bodies in the United States appointed to prepare a united declaration on Christian faith and Christian service.

The report urges that the churches take a more aggressive part in the social and industrial life of the community.

A GREAT REFORMER

Jacob A. Riis Was Noted Social Worker

DID MUCH FOR NEW YORK

Came From Denmark Looking For Work as Carpenter and Had Hard Struggle—Had Great Success as a Reporter

Jacob A. Riis, whose death was announced in the Times on Wednesday was a noted reporter, author and social worker. He died at his summer home in Barre, Mass., on Tuesday, leaving wife and one son.

Theodore Roosevelt once said of him: "He is the most useful citizen of New York," and this expression was repeated as a "generous exaggeration," by a professor in one of the greatest universities in America. That statement of Roosevelt's says the Boston Globe, "has been echoed in substance by thousands of people, not only in the metropolis, but all over the country."

Mr. Riis was born in Ribe, Denmark, on May 8, 1849. His boyhood and youth were spent in his native town. Except for four years, when he was in Copenhagen learning his trade as a builder and carpenter.

He landed in New York on Whitsunday, 1870. There was no active demand for carpenters, and he went to many places before he found his destiny. He first went to Brady's Bend, Pa., where he built huts for the miners, and then took to digging coal. Then the Franco-Prussian war broke out and Riis believing that Denmark would be involved, returned to New York with a purpose of returning to his native country to enter her services. But he had no money for steamer fare, and was so reduced that he had to go to the "free lodgings" of a police station, where he had his first view of the filth and depravity which he afterward helped to abolish.

Learning Newspaper Work

He next found work in a brickyard at Perth Amboy, drifted through New Jersey towns, labored in Philadelphia and Camden and finally as a cabinet maker in Jamestown, N. Y. Then he worked for several years in a Buffalo shipyard. In the meanwhile making a futile effort to learn the newspaper business.

His first real entry into the "fourth estate" came at Hunter's Point, L. I. where he worked two weeks as city editor of a weekly paper, without getting his pay, and later became editor of a Brooklyn paper where he had disagreements with the manager.

At last he found employment as police reporter for the New York Sun at the Mulberry street headquarters. Before this he had returned to Denmark for a short time, but on March 5, 1876, he married Miss Elizabeth D. Neilson, Mrs. Riis was a talented woman, and became a model and leader in several literary and philanthropic organizations, besides being an assistant to her husband, especially as collaborator in his writing.

She died on May 19, 1908, leaving three boys and several girls.

He married a second time.

In his newspaper work, Mr. Riis, unearthed much of squalor, abuse, graft and police corruption than all the papers of the city had done before. His newspaper work was the cause of many reforms.

Mr. Riis did not care for fame, nor for riches, but he did care for the story in "The Making of an American." As a reporter he told his story straight and in words hot with emotion. He turned reformer, but continued to report.

He bought a home with a mortgage all over it, while he was giving lectures for $5 or $10, working for about the same price and laboring on small parks or school playgrounds or to tear down tenements.

One day when Lincoln Steffens reproached him, he replied: "As for the family, God will provide. I know what I am talking about. I've been in all provided, money I don't know." Just then he opened a letter and found a check in payment for a bill contracted years before.

Becomes An Author

Riis gathered with the cleverest reporters in New York the facts of a fine news story, but by grasping them with his sympathy, without a word written there so that he appeared to have a "beat." He realized and visualized where ordinary men failed to see it.

With his newspaper work he studied and made notes, and then wrote "How the Other Half Lives" followed by another sensation "The Children of

Why that Corn?

Why that pain, when Blue-jay would stop it instantly?

Why have a corn, when Blue-jay would remove it in two days?

Why that discomfort, when millions of people could tell you a way to get rid of it?

These are the facts: Blue-jay is applied in a jiffy. And from that instant all pain is stopped.

Then, while you work or sleep or play, Blue-jay undermines the corn. In two days you can lift it out, without any pain or distress.

Think how easy, how simple. While you pare corns, or doctor them in other petty ways, Blue-jay is taking out a million corns a month.

It is simply folly, in these modern days, to suffer from a corn. A single test will prove this.

the Poor." Then came 10 years of fighting but in the end he won his victories and wrote "The Ten Years' War" followed by several others equally vigorous in their exposure of wrong.

The strongest friend Mr. Riis ever had was Theodore Roosevelt from the time the later was police commissioner until after he had served as president. Together they walked through the worst places in the city, night after night found policemen asleep in barber shops or stretched across a barrel; investigated the graft and malfeasance of some of the most trusted police authorities in the city and drove them out of office; hunted up infractions of the building laws; exposed the pollution of the water supply and applied the remedy; and everywhere under the initiative of Riis, fought vice, crime, negligence, inefficiency and corruption in high places.

Because of this revolution guided by Riis, Mr. Roosevelt brought him to accept state, municipal, and national offices, always rising in grade and honor, as he himself advanced to the highest office in the land.

Mr. Riis did hold several offices, municipal and otherwise, among them being that of secretary of the New York Small Parks Commission and that of executive officer of the Good Government Club.

He was a copious writer of magazine articles on social and economic subjects and a dozen or more books, the most important and popular being "How the Other Half Lives" and "The Making of an American."

Hon. C. J. Doherty's Measure Requiring Five Years' Residence For One to Become a Subject is Commended

(Ottawa Journal)

A British subject anywhere will hereafter be a British subject everywhere. This is the chief effect of an act respecting British nationality, naturalization and aliens which received a second reading in the House of Commons.

The bill is the outcome of a desire which has long existed for a uniform system of empire naturalization. The matter was beset with obstacles, and was the subject of discussion at three imperial conferences. Within the last year or two, however, a solution was arrived at and the bills providing for uniform naturalization laws have been introduced in the parliament of most of
