

PUBLIC CANNOT HEAR EVELYN EVIDENCE GIVEN BEHIND CLOSED DOORS Ever Tightening Net of Insanity Woven by Defence Witnesses Around Thaw.

New York, Jan. 17.—The defence in the Thaw trial continued to-day to build up its ever tightening net of irrationality around the man accused of the murder of Stanford White. Alice Fletcher, of Washington, D. C., who said she had been a frequent visitor at the Thaw household in Pittsburgh and had known Harry K. Thaw for six years, was first witness at the trial to-day. She declared that Thaw was an unusual child, nervous and moody with wild and staring eyes. His seldom talked coherently, and was unable to carry on sustained conversation. "Throughout the period you knew Harry Thaw did his acts and appearance impress you as rational or irrational?" asked Mr. Littleton. "Irrational," declared the witness. Miss Fletcher told of seeing Thaw at his mother's home in 1903. Thaw said he had an awful experience, that he believed he was going to die, in fact he wanted to die. He mentioned Evelyn Nesbit's name frequently, but his talk was usually too incoherent to follow. His eyes looked without seeing apparently. On cross-examination Miss Fletcher said that although a frequent guest at the Thaws, she had never known Harry Thaw to be placed under restraint in any way. Mr. Jerome wanted to know if the witnesses' impression of Thaw was only that of a nervous, eccentric man, or a person of unsound mind. "He impressed me always as a person who was not rational," declared Miss Fletcher. "He often acted oddly. As to whether the defendant's senses as to taste, distinguishing of colors, etc., were affected, the witness said she had never made any tests. "Did you observe that his sense of perception differed from other persons?" "I had no way of determining that. "Then you did not notice any difference." She was not willing to admit this. District Attorney Jerome was most insistent in his questioning of the witness, who dressed in black and with gray hair did not appear at first glance unlike the prisoner's mother. Did she ever counsel with his mother as to Thaw's mental condition?" asked the prosecutor. "I remember his mother's anxiety, and her speaking to me about it." "Do you remember anybody you ever discussed the matter with?" "I never discussed Harry Thaw with anybody." Mr. Jerome started to inquire as to whether the witness had ever before observed a young man who was in love with a chorus girl, who just in justice Dowling interrupted to say there was nothing in the evidence so far as to any chorus girl. "Well," said the prosecutor, "had you ever before observed a young man who told you of a beautiful young woman who had been greatly wronged?" "No."

Miss Fletcher insisted that Thaw's talk constantly was incoherent with a frequent shifting of subjects. She could not recall any particular occasion on which there had been violent outbreak of unintelligibility. The next witness was Catherine O'Neill, an elderly woman, who was a nurse in the Thaw family for six years and took charge of Harry Thaw when he was between 3 and 4 years of age. She told of the childhood of the defendant. She described him as very nervous and moody. He would have nervous outbreaks which would end in complete collapse. His mouth would twitch and there were general convulsions. The nervous outbreaks occurred during all of the years the nurse was in the employ of the family, causing her to reach the conclusion that Harry's mind was affected. District Attorney Jerome sought on cross-examination to show that Thaw was simply a child of nervous, excitable disposition, with an unchangeable temper. The nurse admitted he showed all of these tendencies. It was necessary, she said, to call in the family physician after the outbreaks. Thaw suffered from St. Vitus' dance, following scarlet fever. Mr. Littleton here brought about a ripple of excitement by calling Evelyn Nesbit Thaw to the stand. The nurse said Thaw in her blue school girl dress appeared promptly and walked briskly to the stand. White Mrs. Thaw was sitting with anxious face ready for her examination. Mr. Littleton changed tactics and asked her to withdraw for the time being to make way for Policeman Thomas F. Lynch, who was doorman at the Tenderloin police station at the time Thaw was confined there following the shooting of Stanford White. Lynch repeated the testimony he gave at the first trial as to Thaw complaining the morning after his arrest of hearing the voices of children of 12 years of age in the tier of cells above his own. The officer said to Thaw, "You must be dopey, I don't hear anything." Thaw's action in the station impressed the witness as irrational. Dorman Darrett, who was on duty at the station when Thaw first was brought back, followed Lynch. Darrett declared on cross-examination that Thaw when arraigned at the sergeant's desk in the police station appeared like a man who had been stabbed or shot himself. Mrs. Thaw saw her son for the first time in months during the noon recess. The meeting was most affectionate. Evelyn Thaw, the wife, came in during the interview, and it is said she was quite cordially greeted by the elder woman. Dorman Darrett's cross-examination was continued as soon as the afternoon session began. When Mr. Jerome had finished with the policeman, Mrs. William Thaw was called. She gave her name as Mary Copley Thaw, and her residence as Pittsburgh. She was questioned by Mr. Littleton. Thaw looked intently and earnestly at his mother, who was very pale and weak, a sharp contrast to the ruddy good health which marked her appearance a year ago. Her testimony closely followed that of the last trial, beginning with the return of her son to his Pittsburgh home in November, 1903, after Evelyn Nesbit had told him her story in the fall of that summer. "Usually Harry came home buoyant and joyously," she declared, "but this time there was not a smile." Thaw said she asked her son what was the matter. "I can't tell you mother," he replied. "I can never tell you." The mother then repeated what she related to the stand last year as to her son crying and moaning during the night. Of his frequently playing at the piano, when the music would begin loud and then die away, until he would stop, sitting a long while at the instrument with head cast down. Mrs. Thaw said she frequently asked her son what he was worrying him, and finally he declared that a beautiful young girl he was interested in had had a terrible experience in New York. The mother told him he should not worry about such matters, that the girl had a mother who should care for her. Thaw replied that the girl's mother had not looked after her, and that was why he had been so worried. Eventually he told his mother the young girl's name was Nesbit. "The name meant nothing to me," declared the witness. "It was always vague for I had never heard of the young woman before. Harry said it had all occurred when Miss Nesbit was a little girl. It was in New York, I think. I tried to impress upon him that he was not responsible for the sins of other men." "Did you call in a physician?" asked Mr. Littleton. "I did not, but Harry called in Dr. Bingham, an old family physician." District Attorney Jerome suggested that while Evelyn Thaw was giving evidence, in the interest of public morals all persons save those immediately interested in the case should be excluded from the courtroom during the trial of what he termed "a horrible tale." The motion included the representatives of newspapers as well as the public generally. Attorney Martin W. Littleton, of the defence, joined in to shield the young woman from hundreds of curious eyes, and said that, so far as the constitutional right to an open hearing was concerned, he was ready to waive that point in any ironical rules of the court might suggest. Proceedings were suspended until Monday morning, when Justice Downing, who is presiding, will announce his decision. The district attorney's suggestions were a distinct surprise, and called for a discussion from Justice Downing that they would have come with greater force at the first hearing of the case. When Mr. Jerome arose it was generally believed that he was about to contend against the admissibility of young Mrs. Thaw's testimony, on the ground that it could not have had a material effect on the mind of the man who subsequently became her husband, inasmuch as the homicide did not occur until three years thereafter. Mr. Jerome had previously objected to Mrs. Thaw's detailing conversations she had with Thaw three years prior to the tragedy, but Justice Downing ruled that the declarations of the defendant were admissible on general principles, and without any reference to the Wood case, under which the evidence in dispute was admitted last year, and which Mr. Jerome had previously insisted on as a construction of this year. "I will not except to your Honor's ruling," said the district attorney as he took his seat after his objection, "for the state has no power of appeal." Then Mr. Jerome attacked the witness on another point, and by standing immediately in front of her, and by objecting to practically every question which Mr. Littleton asked in his preliminary examination as to their recent history, cut the young woman's recital from the effective narrative of last year into a hundred fragments. Many of the objections, based upon irrelevancy and immateriality, were sustained by the court. When these failed the prosecutor was every ready with others, until the testimony fairly dripped with shreds, and had lost its entire meaning. The many little touches of humor interest which were a part of the narrative last year, when no objections were offered, Mr. Jerome attacked in this year's trial, and he had his object, for the state has no power of appeal. The trial may be concluded in two more weeks.

PERPLEXED OVER MOROCCO QUESTION France Wavering in Her Alliance With Abdul Aziz—Ministers Confer. Paris, Jan. 17.—Premier Clemenceau, Foreign Minister Pichon and Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, the British Premier, who passed through the French capital on his way from Harbire to London recently, had a long conversation regarding the situation in Morocco, the result of which, has not, however, been published. The growing fanaticism of the Moors in favor of Mula Hafid, who now has proclaimed sultan at both Morocco City and Fez, makes the position of France in Morocco increasingly difficult. Apprehensions are cropping up that perhaps France may have been backing the wrong horse, and that it would be better to accept Mula Hafid, if he does not repudiate the Algerian sultan in his new developments. French support of Abdul Aziz, at present could only injure his cause with the Moors in the interior.

THEATRE FIRE VICTIM St. Catharines, Ont., Jan. 17.—Lorne McDermitt, burned in the theatre fire, died this morning.

SALVATION ARMY TO SUPPLY DOMESTICS Capt. Richard Will Be Here on Monday Evening for the Purpose. Anybody desiring a domestic servant may secure one through the agency of the Salvation Army, whose representatives, Capt. Richard Will, may be found at No. 8 Amelia street, this city, Monday evening. As previously noted in the Times, some 250 girls are being brought into Canada under the auspices of the Salvation Army, and these girls will be distributed to meet the requirements of those who are willing to subscribe to the following conditions: 1. The applicant to advance $50 to ward the transportation of domestic, to be repaid by a registration fee of $2, making a total of $52 advanced by applicant. 2. Domestic to repay the amount advanced by applicant in monthly instalments, until the amount advanced for fare has been repaid—less the registration fee. 3. Domestic to receive a wage of not less than $15 per month. She will sign an agreement to engage for twelve months, if so desired by employer. 4. Not more than one-half of the wages to be applied to the repayment of fare advanced. It is announced that two competent lady staff officers have been delegated from England to make careful selection of young women suitable for domestic work. It is explained that the acceptance of an applicant for a domestic will not constitute a contract, and if the Army is unable to meet the requirements of the applicant within a reasonable time the amount of the deposit will be returned in full. Correspondence on this subject may be directed to W. J. Wakefield, adjutant, the army immigration officer in Vancouver.

CONSECRATED TO ORGIES AND THAW'S LETTERS TO ANTHONY COMS. Revelations in Famous Describe White's "D of Infamy."

New York, Jan. 22.—Anthony Comstock, vice-president of the Society for the Suppression of Vice, was a witness at the trial of Harry Thaw to-day. He testified that 1904 Thaw came to him and confided in him several times and was a frequent visitor at the vice-president's headquarters. Letters were read in evidence which showed the names of the alleged victims of White in the famous Twentieth street studio house, and that White was the "blackguard." The trial was a "consecrated" one, as it was controlled by six or seven "standards."

The letters were new evidence, and were mentioned at the trial when Dr. Evans was testifying. Thaw had said to him of his having Stanford White sent to the hospital. "I don't want to kill the fellow," said Thaw, "but I want to have him brought to court as his case known. Providence interposed; it was an act of Providence that followed. Thaw returned this morning at one of the defenses, began Mr. Littleton's cross-examination of the witness, and was a frequent visitor at the vice-president's headquarters.
