King's Camp Bed. King George always includes in his luggage when he goes shooting a little folding-up camp bed. For years he used to endure sleeping in the historic "four-poster" especially reserved for him in the royal suite in great mansions. because it had been occu-

ed for him in the royal suite in great mansions, because it had been occupied centuries ago by one of his sovereign forbears. The King at last kicked against the unhygienic distinction with its feather tick and curtains. After domestic morality George V. makes a fetish of hygiene. Even at home in the various palaces he favors the small bed with the hard mattress and insists on his sons doing likewise. When in the spring he was visiting Mr. and Mrs. John Ward, an old-fashioned housekeeper, who has been in the Ward family for years, thought she would make his Majesty more than usually comfortable, and without saying anything to anyone piled on his bed two feather ticks. She was amazed when a few hours later the King's valet arrived with his luggage and fixed up in the gorgeous room a bed from her point of view so comfortless that she promptly came to the conclusion it was intended for some attendant. "A poor sort of bed," she said, "for a royal servant. Were I to offer it to one of mine, he'd be out of the house in the twinkling of an eye."

First-Born Children Weakest. First-Born Children Weakest.

Primegeniture has just received another hard knock. It is several years since Dr. W. C. Rivers, cf London, in studying the statistics of a great sanitarium, observed that among consumptive patients the first-born provide a larger number of subjects than Prof. Kari vide a larger number of subjects than any of the other children. Prof. Karl Pearson and Profs. Brehmer and Rif-fel collected a vast mass of statistics England and Germany and fully in England and Germany and fully confirmed Rivers' observation.

Brehmer had been teaching that the first-born children were the strongest, but he proved that the opposite was true. A medical authority states that not only tuberculosis but "insanity and criminality show a preponderating incidence among the eldest children," and quotes Trof. Pearson's statement that the earlier members of a family are more likely than the younger to inherit constitutional defects. It adds that a tendency to coddle, pamper and indulge the first child may account for a part of its vulnerability to disease.

Decidedly new Animals of Canada. In Wickerware. Northern Canada is still teeming with animal life. From some notes in the United Empire we learn that the musk ox still lingers among the Arcplar bear and the walrus are still polar bear and the wairus are still comparatively common on the Alas-kan and Arctic shores. Geese, ducks, curlews anda host of birds are yet to be found in the comparative isola-tion of their hidden sanctuaries. But York, Philadelphia and Chicago are showing these dainty novelties of tion of their ninden sanctuaries. But year by year these nobler forms of animal life are becoming more and more open to the attacks of irresponsible individuals who have no care for the future, and who still less believe that this wealth of animal life is worth preservation. These articles are well and strongly nade. First there is a line of Trays of zarious shapes and sizes, with cretonne restres. Then there is a splendid array of Fruit Baskets and Curattes.

Coin collectors can find a new rar y in last year's pennies. Owing to be extraordinary demand for bronze ity in last year's pennies. Owing to the extraordinary demand for bronze, due largely to the deduction of four-pence from wages under the insur-nace aft, the Mint was obliged to con-tract for a portion of the issue from a private mint in Birmingham. The Birmingham penny is distinguished by a small "H." in front of the date, and when new is of slightly larger diameter than the Royal Mint coin.

English Town Housecleans. Bradford, Eng., is doing some city replanning. The municipality will wipe out a maze of buildings in its BALDWIN'S. wape out a maze of buildings in its most ancient and most valuable part, where the streets are from eight to twelve yards wide, putting in new and broad streets and buildings from five to eight stories high. SLANG AND LITERATURE.

Expressions In Classics Which Make Modern Youngsters Grin.

Expressions like "beat, it," "give him a lemon," "twenty-three," "make good," "forget it," "butt in," and many others, may be found in almost any book, but to cite them as cases of slang is unfair and ridiculous, says Francis Herbert Lee. When we find in "Love's Labor's Lost," "Gave Hector a gift—a gift numeg—a lemon," it—is only a coincidence; the modern slang meaning is absolutely wanting. Hawthorne writes, "Forget it—cast it away"; Deuteronomy has "made good"; but these are perfectly proper uses. A man may "make good" some one's losses, but it is only the later slang use of "make good" that makes us pause over the expression or see anything out of the way in it.

it is only the later slang use of "make good" that makes us pause over the expression or see anything out of the way in it.

That is one great trouble with slang, it profanes or renders ludicrous sometimes, or gives a false connotation to some word or expression that occurs in a sublime or pathetic scene, some passage that contains, or should contain "thoughts that do often lie too deep for tears." When Sydney Garton, in "The Tale of Two Cities," with a sublime self-sscrifice gives his life for his friends, and his head falls into the executioner's basket, the knitting women who are counting off the number of victims say, "Twenty-three." It is almost a profanation even to write it, but almost certainly the modern girl or boy will not be able to suppress a smile when those words are read, because of the meaning-peculiarly appropriate here—suggested by the slang association of the expression. It is not too much to say that if a teacher read that wonderful and beautiful story to a class all the pathetic effect would be lost. "Twenty-three" has been sctually cited in print from "The Tale of Two Cities" as the origin of our modern slang phrase. There could not be a more striking or more outrageous example of misapplication of words.

We have known a roomful of two thousand boys scandalize the dignified president of a great high school and go into screams of laughter over a speech in which he represented a drummer boy, at a critical moment in a great battle when the French troops were breaking into a rout, as pleading with Napoleon for permission to the anecdote which brought down the house."

A Great Telescope. A Great Telescope.

A number of persons were talking about telescopes, and each professed to have looked through the "largest in the world." One after another told of the powerful effect of the respective telescopes. At last a quiet man said mildly: "I once looked through a telescope. I don't know that it was the largest in the world I home it a telescope. I don't know that it was the largest in the world. I hope it wasn't. But it brought the moon so near that we could see the man in it gesticulating wildly and crying out: 'Don't shoot! Don't shoot!' The old duffer thought it was a big cannon that we were pointing at him.' The quiet man subsided and so did all the rest.

Mexico's Historic Stone Lizard.

A weird-looking creature is that known to scientists as the mysterious stone lizard of Cuernavaca, Mexico. This reptile, carved on a huge bould lying on an overgrown hillside, is situated about eight miles from Cuernavaca and 70 miles southwest of Mexico City. It was there, centuries old, when Cotteg first saw Cuernavaca, and is supposed to have been carved to commemorate some events in the wanderings of the prehistoric civilized race which built the great palace at Xochicalco, a few miles away. If this curious relic could speak, what tales it could tell of the long-dead past!

The scallop can anchor itself as well as any ship. It never fails to drop its anchor on the approach of rough weather. The scallop, lying in its bed of shoal water, foresees a storm in true sailor fashion and at once puts out a tough and elastic little cable from a point near its hinge. This cable it fastens firmly to the nearest rock. It is then secure in the wilest weather. He who wades through haunted shoals as a storm approaches may see the tiny shell-fish mooring themselves on all sides with silent bustle. The Scallop.

Marshal Whitlatch, a noted golfer, explains why particularly brainy men often make a poor showing at that sport. They think so hard about hitting the ball in just the proper manner, he says, that their muscles are tensed, and the free swing of the stroke is spoiled. His theory, suggested to him by the Montessori system, is that the player should relax his mind as well as his muscles, feel out the correct position and aim in action; in short, that good golf is all a matter of subconscious habit.

Positive Proof. "Yes, indeed, my husband is a re-markable man." "I suppose nearly every woman has that opinion of her husband." "But I am sure my husband is an extract II am I told him this norning where something was in one of the closets and he found it."

Rather Expensive Advice. Young Man—I should like to ask your advice, sir, as to whether you think your daughter would make a suitable wife.

Lawyer—No, I don't think she would. Five dollars, please.

Educational. There is only one occasion when a business education is more preferable for a woman than housekeeping abil-ity, and that is when she has a hus-band to support.

Getting It Right. "Jenks says he lives by his wits."
"I should say by other people's lack of wits."

Prevent taking cold,
Often you come home, cold and shivering—feet are wet, throat is raw, chest a tittle sore. A bad cold is just beginning. Pat a Nerviline Prous Plaster on your chest, rab your throat with Nerviline, and take a stiff does of Nerviline in hot water. This prevents a chill, and checks the cold instantly. No remedies so useful in the home, so sure to prevent serious illness as Negviline and Nerviline Plasters. Sold by all dealers. 25c. each, but be sure you got the ginging, and refuse any substitute. NO GAS BILL FOR THEM.

Maoris Cook Their Food In a Ritchen
Provided by Nature.

The Maoris of northern New Zealand enjoy cooked food to a far greator extent than other natives, but they never bother with fire. They build their huts on the edge of some "friendly" geysit, where they may cook in nature's kitchen. On a spot which superstition would associate with death and the devil, the buts of about 200 Maoris lie scattered—the remnant of the one war-like inte of Tuhourangi. Nature has built for these simple fol's the best of all cooking appliances and saved them endies trouble with the stove, gas company or coal merchant.

A pond of boiling water lies in the middle of the settlement. In this the Maori woman puts her water kettle to boil, or hangs the wide-meshed flax bag filled with potatoes, and waits until they are cooked. True, the potatoes cooked in their skins taste a little of sulphur, but that is the right flavor for a Maori pale—the hautgout for the brown gourmet.

For the cooking of masts the fumaroles, or holes through which steam escapes from the ground are used. Abox with a wooden grating for a bottom is placed on the ground over the hole. In this the Maori woman places the meat, well coveral with tin or iron pots. An old sugar bag is then spread over the box, and the crude apparatus is left until the imprisoned steam has completely, cooked the joint. Maoris Cook Their Food In a Kitche

Margaret Roper.

There were some great women in the age of Elizabeth as well as great men who adorned that remarkable period of adventure, and literary activity, but few of whom had their names passed on to future generations.

Perhaps the greatest of these was liargaret Roper, the daughter of Sir Thomas More, who was well skilled in Greek, Latin and other languages; proficient in the sciences, as then known, and as remarkable for determination and strength of character as the great Queen herself. Tradition the great Queen herself. Tradition records that Queen Elizabeth offere Henry VIII.

The head of Sir Thomas More was

The head of Sir Thomas more was stuck on a pole and placed on London Bridge, where it remained fourteen days. Margaret Roper determined to gain possession of this gruesome trophy. Aubrey tells how she proceeded: "One day as she was passing under the bridge looking up at her father's head she exclaimed, "That head has lain many a time in my lap; would to God it would fall in my lap as I pass." under.' She had her wish for it fe into her lap." Aubrey's account of this "miraculous" happening is thu explained; She bribed a bridge keep er to throw it over the bridge wh ne should see her passing under in boat, and the exclamation that sh boat, and the excisination that are made was a cue devised between het and the bridge keeper. When turn moned before the council, for having the head in her "ossession she boldly declared that her "father's head should never be food for fishes." For this she was imprisoned, but was soon liberated. She petained the head which she had inclosed in a leader

Electric Ice-Cream Freezer.

An electric ice-cream freezer has been devised by a London inventor. In the usual freezer tank, generally, of larger size for wholesale manufacture, hotels, or the like, is mounted at tubular coil supplied from a carbonic acid machine which takes the place of ice and salt. The small machine is mounted on a wall frame together with a small electric motor which drives it by belt from above, so that the outfit takes up very little floor space. Cleanliness is secured by the space. Cleanliness is secured by the entire absence of crushed ice and said entire absence of crushes lee and sart and there are no wet floors. It is claimed that the electric device al-so gives considerable economy in working. Another point is that where there are electric motors already in use for other purposes, the ice-cream machine can be driven from them without entailing the extra expense of Smartly Rebuked. It is not often miserliness gets sur straight-forward rebuke as is r a straight-forward rebuke as is recorded in this story.

In the early days of Primitive Methodism there traveled in England an eccentric minister named Neale, who was famous for his plain talking. On one gegasion he was preaching missionary sermons at a village so noted for its small collections that he determined to pass the plate himself. On his round he came to a farmer who was, as Mr. Neale well knew, the richest min in the place. This individual placed a penny in the plate. Mr. Neale stopped immediately, and said in a loud voice:

"Take your penny out, man! Take it out! Don't you see you've covered up your laborer's stypence?"

The rebuke was effectual, and a much more valuable coin was placed on the plate.

Guilty Anyhow. Daniel O'Connell was at one time defending a man accused of murde at Clonmel. The circumstantial evi at Clonmel. The circumstantial evidence was so strong against the prisoner that the jury had already determined upon their verdict of guilty when the man supposed to be murdered was brought into court alive and unhurt. The jury were desired to return their verdict at once, and they did so, but it was one of "Guilty." "'What does this mean!" said the judge. "If the man has not been murdered how can the prisoner be guilty?" "Please, yer honor," said the foreman, "he's guilty. He stole my bay mare three years ago."

Sheer Waste, Robert Lows, afterwards Lorshebrooke, once saw a deal mamber of Parliament trying his best to este with his ear-trumpet the words of a extremely dull speech.

"Just look at that foolish may said Lowe, "throwing away his abral advantages."
