OUT IN THE AIR.

Jes' gittin' out in the air's a boon. Jes' gittin' out in the air, When the peace o' God in the mornin' time Lies round' you everywhere, An' the breath o' the flowers an' grass Is like An' incense an' a prayer.

The smell an' the feel an' the sense o' things, The song, the shine an' the hue Beem to sort o' git in a feller's soul An' to wash it clean an' new— You feel like you 'uz a part o' them An' they 'uz a part o' you.

They ain't no use o' misery An' they ain't no use o' wring; They're both jes' discords, an' they don't To the skeem o' things belong. Git your soul in tune with the world an' God, An' life grows like a song.

The hills an' the trees to him on high Sing one eternal psalm; The great wide reaches o' earth an' sky Are filled with a nameless calm, An' the scent an' freshness out o' the fields Breathe over the soul a balm.

The cup o' blessin' overflows; They's gladness enough to spare To every creature beneath the sun— Why rob yourself o' a share? Go, drink your fill in the mornin' time By gittin' out in the air. —J. A. Edgerton

He Will Cure You First—Then You Pay Him

The physician, who has not sufficient confidence in his own ability to cure his patient first, will receive his pay afterwards. Dr. Goldberger's acceptance of this principle is equivalent to a guarantee. He never accepts a case unless he is satisfied to receive the money for the cure. He has given the patient, when he has proved his worth and shown positive and definite results before he asks for the fee. So, should he fail to cure the case, the patient loses nothing, while the doctor, when he cures the patient, has given him what is worth much more than money—he has given him his health back. Dr. Goldberger is the first specialist in the United States or Canada, who has had sufficient confidence in his ability to say to the afflicted that not a dollar need be paid until cured. There is no guesswork, no experiment about his method. He is a known expert in his chosen specialty, and offers you the best, and only the best treatment, than your life or your health is at stake. Inferior treatment (which lasts after-effects worse than the disease itself) is dear at any price. Dr. Goldberger has 14 diplomas and certificates from the various colleges and state boards of medical examiners, which should be sufficient guarantee as to his standing and ability. It makes no difference who has failed to cure you, it will be to your advantage to get the doctor's opinion of your case free of charge. He wants to hear from patients who have been unable to recover, as he guarantees a positive cure for all chronic, nervous, blood and skin diseases, which he accepts for treatment. He not only cures the condition itself, but likewise all complications, such as rheumatism, bladder or nervous debility, lack of vitality, stomach trouble, etc. All medicines for patients are prepared in his laboratory to meet the requirements of each individual case. He will send a booklet on the subject, which contains the 14 diplomas and certificates, entirely free. All medicines for Canadian patients sent from Windsor, Ont., duty and transportation prepaid. THE DESPISED TOAD.

POPULAR HATRED OF THE ANIMAL OF GREAT ANTIQUITY.

Is legendary as well as in superstitions. Love the Uncouth and Misshapen Creature Plays No Small Part—The Belief in Toad Stones.

The unfortunate toad has from time immemorial been an object of distrust and aversion, especially among the common people. A pleasing tale runs that a gentleman, walking along a country lane, came suddenly upon a village boy belaboring the crushed body of a toad with a heavy stick and exclaiming at each blow, "I'll larn 'e to be a toad!" whereat the indignant newcomer, seizing the miscreant by his collar, vigorously applied a cane to his legs, remarking, "I'll larn you to be a boy!" The popular hatred of the toad, indeed, is of such antiquity and is still so general as to seem ineradicable. That the creature is not dangerously poisonous it is hopeless to attempt to convince the ordinary rustic. Doubtless this belief has its origin in the acid secretion which the toad has the power of emitting when disturbed or annoyed unduly and which will cause a dog that has incautiously picked up a toad to foam at the mouth. Again, the uncouth appearance of the creature has had much to do with the feeling of repulsion with which it has always been regarded. "Squat like a toad" is the phrase by which Milton describes the evil one essaying to reach the ear of Eve.

Superstition, in truth, has laid a firm hold on the toad's misshapen figure. The belief, not only in the existence of "toad stones," but in their efficacy as a sovereign remedy for certain ills, which is still common in parts of the country, is of very ancient date. "There is to be found in the heads of old and great toads," says Fenton, writing in 1599, "a stone they call borax, or stelen, which being used as rings, gives forewarning of venom." In the Londonborough collection is a silver ring of the fifteenth century in which one of these toad stones is set. They were supposed always to bear on their surface a figure resembling a toad, being somewhat similar trinkets, one may imagine, to the scarabean ornament of the Egyptians. Another early writer remarks, "A toad stone called 'crepandia,' touching any part envenomed by the bite of rat, wasp, spider or other venomous beast, ceases the pain and swelling thereof." It was believed that when brought near to poison the stone sweated and changed color, thus conveying to its wearers a timely warning of danger.

It is to these peculiar amulets that Shakespeare is supposed to refer in "As You Like It."

Sweet are the uses of adversity, Which, like the toad, ugly and venomous, Wears yet a precious jewel in his head.

Is it not probable, however, that the poet, being a poet, is here alluding to the eye of the toad, an object, as all who are really familiar with the appearance of this humble batrachian will agree, than which there are few more beautiful in nature?

Perhaps the most familiar superstition in regard to toads is that, still rife, which supposes them capable of existing for an indefinite period in the interior of rocks, stones or hermetically sealed cavities. Numberless "authentic instances" of this remarkable power have been brought forward from time to time. The following example from an old book is typical: "In 1793 Mr. George Wilson, a mason, met with a toad, which he wanted to immerse in a stone wall that he was then building. In the middle of the wall he made a close cell of lime and stone, just fit for the magnitude of its body and seemingly so plastered as to prevent the admission of air. In 1809, sixteen years afterward, it was found necessary to open a gap in this wall for a passage of carts, when the poor creature was found alive in its stronghold. It seemed at first in a very torpid state, but it soon recovered animation and activity and, as if sensible of the blessings of freedom, made its way to a collection of stones and disappeared." It is known that toads can exist for a long time without food, and it is generally believed that they live to a great age, and doubtless these two peculiarities have had much to do with the superstition in regard to their supposed penchant for a hermit's life. The fallacy, however, was completely exposed by Dean Buckland, father of Frank Buckland, the great naturalist, who went to the trouble of testing the truth of the theory by an exhaustive series of experiments. It need only be remarked that none of his victims survived the incarceration.

In legendary as in superstitious lore the toad plays no small part. It may not be generally known that the deure-dils of France was originally in shape a toad. Thus at least runs the tale, Clovis, king of France, bore on his banner the device of three toads, or "botes," as they were called in old French. His baptism gave great umbrage to the Arians, who rebelled and assembled a large host against him under King Candat. Clovis while on his way to meet the heretics was granted a vision, wherein he saw in the heavens his device of three toads miraculously changed into three lilies "or" on a banner "azur." Such a banner he caused instantly to be made, calling it his "lil-lambe."—London Globe.

The Only One. "Charles," said Miss Passay coyly, speaking of her fiance, "is quite individual. He is different from other men." "Of course, he's willing to be engaged to you," replied Miss Sharpe-Exchange.

REASON No 42 WHY YOU SHOULD USE

Red Rose Tea

Because it is Reliable. Some one has said: "A single fact is worth a ship-load of argument."

A few facts: I introduced this tea to the public about ten years ago. In that short time the business has grown to such proportions that we now occupy the largest Tea warehouse in Canada.

This enormous business has been built up without extensive advertising.

The merchants who commenced handling Red Rose Tea ten years ago are the most enthusiastic in its praises to-day.

The merchants who sell it, the people who drink it, have found that it could be relied on.

The brand, "Red Rose Tea," is accepted everywhere as a guarantee of the highest quality, and those who drink it are its best advertisers.

Ask some of your friends about it.

Emblem of the Red Cross.

The selection of the emblem of the Red Cross Society was an obligation to Switzerland, which country had announced her interest in humanity by officially issuing invitations to the nations of the world to meet in conference and establish rules for the government of civilized communities when engaged in warfare. The national flag of Switzerland is a white Greek cross on a red ground, and the colors of the Red Cross flag were simply reversed. By the terms of the Red Cross treaty the hospital flag of every nation must be a red Greek cross, on a white ground, and every person, ambulance, or other essential of the service must be so designated.
