WEATHER SOLDIERS

The rain last night affected very materially the attendance at drill Colonel Rankin and Major Scholfield were absent, as were all the other officers except Captains Stone and Black, Lieutenants Lewis and Turner, Adjutant Coltart and Sergt .- Major Geo. Embrey. Licut. Lewis was the most unfortunate of the bunch. When he left home it wasn't raining very much, so he thought that his cape was sufficient protection; besides, it does not look very soldier-like to carry an umbrella. Lieut. Lewis had no sooner reached the creek bridge than it began to pour. The officer thought that a cloud-burst had seen him first. When he reached the drill hall he was soaked through his cape, forage cap and all.

B Company was the best represent-ed. Including the officers they mus-tered about 20 men. Captain Black and Lieut. Turner drilled the men in firing exercises, with the assistance of Adjutant Coltart. Capt. Stone drilled the soldiers in taking orders by sig-
