

SENCE CONVICTS TO THE FRONT

Dissatisfaction Is Felt In France That Criminals Bear No Part in the War.

Paris, Nov. 1.—(Correspondence of The Associated Press)—The protection from German shells enjoyed by convicts through their own misdeeds, while the law-abiding men of France able to bear arms are making such heavy sacrifices, has raised a discussion as to the propriety of sending to the front of all able-bodied men now in prison.

"Fall-bird slackers" is the name given to men sentenced in 1914 or previously to periods of confinement that have carried them over the first two years of the war. A law recently introduced in the Chamber of Deputies by Pierre Ramel and Andre Hesse contemplates the incorporation of certain categories of these men. The proposition was received with considerable satisfaction until a study of the question developed forcible objections. A great many people held that it would be according too much honor to allow convicts to fight at the front alongside the gallant soldier of the republic. Others held that the results would scarcely justify the experiment, while the number of recruits that could be obtained this way, estimated at the Ministry of Justice between 3,000 and 4,000, would furnish too small an effort to justify the risk. It would be necessary to provide an organization absolutely separate and distinct from any other arm of the service to prevent contact between convicts and

A great many prisoners have been led for the privilege of a suspension of their sentence to permit them to go to the front, and have thus appealed with some force to the sentiment of charitably minded people. There are precedents, however, showing that the men who have gone to the front to clear themselves of stains upon their record have not in every case justified the hope that was entertained.

RIKISHA IS GOING

Tokio, Nov. 1.—The electric car and automobile is steadily forcing the tiny and artistic rikisha to the wall. Not so very long ago Tokio was filled with fleet rikisha runners. Wealthy families boasted of their kuruma men. But these fast runners, tall and strong, are now scarcely met with.
