Lloyd George during the course of a vigorous speech yesterday in the British House, defended in warm terms the formation of an Inter-Allied War Council and scored his critics with characteristic vim. The British Premier can always attend to any job of that kind in a most complete manner. In concluding he said:

"There were two fears, two things that could defeat us: the submarine and a lack of unity. Of the submarine I have no longer any fear. We are on its track, and I am glad to tell the House that on Saturday we destroyed five of these pests of the seas.

"The only other thing is lack of unity. Unity is the only sure way to victory, a victory that will bring peace and healing to a world which is bleeding to death."

And it is this very spirit of unity as
