TOLEDO. SATURDAY, Sept. 22—A large num-ber from here have attended Crossley and Hunter's services at Smith's Falls. While a load of our young people were going down to Smith's Falls to hear Crossley and Hunter last Sunday might they met with an accident very carelessly, which might have turned out seriously. They were about half way there when the driver, who was not there when the driver, who was not attending to his business, allowed the horses to walk off a steep bank near a bridge, thereby upsetting the whole load. The team ran away with the waggon bottom side up, but they were soon caught. After this it would be

CHARLESTON LAKE Our Summer Resort y REV. J. J. CAMERON, M. A. Oh, Charleston Lakei thy sylvan ol I.would in verse declare, As nestling in fond Nature's arms You breathe her bracing air, Thy waters calm or rippled o'er By summer's balmy breeze Awaken echoes on the shore, Begirt with whispering trees. Hegrit with winspering trees. Thy rock-crown'd hills arrayed in green, Or clad in Autumn's hue, Present to th' artist's eye a scene Which charms the more we view. Thy bosom's decked with forn-clad isles. Where cheerful cots invite, Where faces wreathed in sunny smiles Glance down from rustic height. "Point Geraldine"! Oh, charming spot! "Camp Jolly,"—"Idle While, And many another cosy cot. Crowns many a verdant isle. "Cedar Park" and "Duffield House" Adorn thy sloping sides, Where spacious rooms for gent or spous The genial host provides. With various fish thy waters teem, To tempt the angler's art ; Bass, salmon, pickerel, leap and gleam To cheer the fisher's heart. Here and there white sails appear, Spread to the favoring gale, The splash of oarsmen greet the ear And merry voices hall.

With boats and yachts, thou seem's With pic-nic parties gay; Some sail, some row, some fish, som Some read, some sing, some play.

As on thy beauteous face we gaze, Our thoughts, unbidden, rise To Him whose matchless power and Is writ on earth and skies. To Him who paints the lilies fair That on thy bosom grow, Who bade thy hoary hills uprear, Thy silvery waters flow.

Long may thy charms, Oh, nestling lake Attract the young, the old, Thy choicest blessings to partake-Blessings unbought with gold,

Long may the Union Jack on high Unfurl to catch the breeze, And Stars and Stripes, beneath one sky, Proclaim eternal peace.

Long may th' Athenian to thy shrine, His annual visit make, Beneath thy shady bowers recline And laud his Charleston Lake.

Long may the tourist come and go To breath thy bracing air, Till all the land thy merits know, Thy priceless blessings share.
