

A LIFETIME OF SICKNESS

Worn Out, Thin and Miserable Until She Took "Fruit-a-tives"

PALMERSTON, June 20th, 1914.
"Sickness Trouble and Distressing Headaches nearly drove me wild. Some time ago, I got a box of 'Fruit-a-tives,' your famous fruit medicine, and they completely relieved me. To-day I am feeling fine and a physician, meeting me on the street, asked the reason for my improved appearance. I said, 'I am taking Fruit-a-tives.' He said, 'If Fruit-a-tives make you look so well, go ahead and take them. They are doing more for you than I can.'"

Condemns Social Frivolity.

Mrs. Grace McLeod Rogers, of Amherst, N. S., the well known writer of the charming stories of the Land of Evangeline, recently addressed the Women's Canadian Club of St. John. Mrs. Rogers dealt with the part women in Canada should play during the war, and severely criticised the thoughtlessness and pleasure-seeking tendencies which have been evidenced.

Mrs. Rogers, after a few opening remarks, related the story of the finding of Jesus in the Temple and His reply to His parents:—"What ye not that I must be about My Father's business?" This, she stated, would be her theme of the evening for she did not think women of Canada are about their Father's business when they make enjoyment and pleasure a means to raise money for patriotic purposes.

There is no harm in pleasures, she said, but they have their place. There are sad times and times of peril when England and Canada are at war, she asked, are not also the women of Canada at war? She deplored the practice of holding Red Cross dances and such entertainment, for there are many other ways of getting the desired results, such as sacred concerts, patriotic concerts, teas and sewing societies for sale.

Mrs. Rogers referred to the effect these big social gatherings had on the young men who were there in silk hose and patent slippers, while other boys, who are at the front, are standing on guard all through the night, knee deep in water, with only a hole in the ground, a bar or a pigsty in which to sleep. She realized that all men could not go but those that stay at home can lead the strong many life and improve themselves otherwise than by catering to their lust for pleasure at such a time.

Mrs. Rogers related instances of heroism and devotion on the part of the nurses and the men who had gone to the front and asked her hearers if they thought these men and women had given up all the comforts of home life and all their friends because they wanted to or was it not rather that they had been impelled by the strict sense of duty. She cited the manner in which pleasure and all useless expenditure had been done away with in the royal family, and urged thrift and self denial during the war. She added that she could not understand why the women of Canada are unwilling to forego their gaieties when they have so many of their loved ones in the muddy trenches in Flanders.

If any living one in the home were to die, she asked, would the family give a party, feed, yet, Canada is only our larger home and many of her children are facing death and many have given up their lives for us. "What a grand thing it would be," she added, "were every woman in Canada to feel she also is a soldier; that she is on duty and that she stands at attention." Kitchener had stated that all must do their part, women as well as men, and the words of other great leaders all carry the same message. She urged that the pursuit of pleasure be not the goal of the Canadian woman of today. "She should have a more serious mien, being helpful and bringing cheerfulness. We

To Mothers of Delicate Children
Palmyra, Pa.—"My little girl had a chronic cough and was so thin you could count her ribs and she had no appetite. Nothing we gave her seemed to help her, until one day Mrs. Netherly asked me to try Vinol, and now she is chubby all the time, her cough is gone, she is stronger and has a more healthy color. I wish every mother who has a delicate child would try Vinol."—Mrs. ALPHEA SLACK.

SALONICA

Salonica was under rule of the Turks for six centuries before it came into the hands of the Greeks again, but it never became a Turkish city, although it contains more than forty mosques. More than half of the population consists of Jews, who practically control all trade and commerce. The Jews immigrated from Spain during the sixteenth century and they are still called "Spaniards." At the beginning of the seventeenth century the city and thirty-six Jewish congregations and its High School for Rabbis was famous throughout the East. Samuel Isaac, a Jewish poet of that time, called the city "a mother of the Jews, a paradise the like of which can be found nowhere in the wide world."

The historian Hadashi Khalifa reports that the rugs and carpets produced by the Jewish weavers of Salonica were more famous during the seventeenth century than those of Smyrna and Persia. The Jewish merchants of the city supplied Occidental countries with the products of the Orient and sent their ships to Venice, Genoa, Marseilles, Spain, and even England and the German Hansa ports. Formerly the 65,000 Jews of Salonica lived in a ghetto, but more than 2,000 of their houses were destroyed by fire in September, 1890, and they are now scattered all over the city. They form about fifty-five per cent of the population. The rest of the inhabitants consists of twenty-five per cent Greeks, fifteen per cent Turks and five per cent Bulgars, Serbians and Italians. The Jews still speak a corrupt Spanish, but most of them also understand Greek, Bulgarian, Serbian, Italian or Turkish. In the past three centuries they have given to Turkey some of her greatest statesmen.

This Boy Lived in the Trenches

ROBERT VINCENT
Sixteen-year-old son of a Boston doctor, who ran away from home and got to France where he joined the boy scouts and was sent to the front as a despatch carrier. After eight months in the trenches the French authorities sought him out and packed him off home.

BRITISH LEADER'S RISE

Merit is Recognized Despite Wrong Tradition to the Contrary

While the British army before the war had the reputation for being officered by aristocrats, this was not then entirely so and it becomes still less of a true statement every day. Indeed many of the Generals were once privates and worked their way up by sheer ability. There is, for instance, Brigadier General J. T. R. Wilson, who went to the Bantam as Colonel of the Fifth Battalion of the Royal Scots, won his Distinguished Service Order "for initiative and fine powers of leadership," and was promoted to the command of a brigade. Twenty-one years previously he joined the High Constabulary Company of the Queen's Edinburgh Rifles as a private and rose steadily until he commanded it.

Cambridge's "Crack" Team

On the field at Cambridge University an association football game was played in which the centre half and the outside wing had each an arm in a sling, the goalkeeper had a wound in his leg and practically every other man had a gloved hand or an arm bandaged from a serious blow. They were an object lesson in the way English university men have fought for their country.

A Vast Line of Trenches

There are twenty miles of trenches to every line of front, so that between Switzerland and the North Sea the British and French armies have at least 10,000 miles of trenches to guard and keep in order.

knit and sew," she added, "and then do things that are foolish, when everybody should be so quiet and reserved under the present conditions."

The lesson of our lives today is not the pursuit of pleasure but steady endeavor on the part of those at home to do things that will be helpful in the preservation of right and truth and liberty.

INTOXICATING PILLS

German and Austrian Soldiers Are Fed With Them Before Battle

The mystery of the pits with which German and Austrian troops are provided has been elucidated. A fine of was thought that they were intended to assuage hunger, the nourishing properties of a "strong man's" being attributed to each pill. Examinations of German prisoners in Russia reveal the fact that these pills are for a different purpose. One pill contains sufficient narcotic or alcoholic properties to make a man slightly drunk. It stimulates him and fills him with a courage for battle. He feels for a relatively short time more vigorous.

Two of these pills are served out daily to the German soldiers, especially before an attack, or on those days when a particularly trying ordeal is in the trenches. It is anticipated. When the pills are given alcoholic rations are cut off. Prolonged use of this new discovery of German chemists causes a feeling of discomfort and a weakening of the whole physical organism, so that soon the soldier has no new relish for the dose.

TAXIGABS IN KAMERUN

Remarkable Campaign of Anglo-French Near the Equator

Fifty London taxicabs, specially about one hundred miles from the equator played a most important part in the fall of the Kamerun country on the west coast of Africa, according to Mr. John H. Howell, sub-lieutenant of H. M. S. Afrango, who took part in practically all of the campaigns against the Germans there, as it was waged by a British column from Freetown to the coast of this country, which is nearly as large as Germany. The capture was effected only after one of the most brilliant campaigns known in the history of the world, in which individual sacrifice and courage such as is rivalled only by the feats of the allied armies in France and Flanders have been displayed.

NOT LIKE BOER WAR

Wounds More Quickly Infected and With More Tearing

Sir Anthony Bosely, Surgeon-in-Chief to King George, has been drawing some interesting comparisons between the present campaign and the one in South Africa. In the South Africa War wounds were not so severe, and there was less smashing than in the present campaign. There bullets had frequently travelled for more than half a mile and lost much of their velocity, whereas in the present war the bullet only travelled a few yards. The ordinary bullet wound of the South Africa war was quite small, as though it had been made with a bradawl. In the present war there was much more tearing of the tissues, and one bullet that has struck Sir Anthony is the extreme rapidly with which wounds become infected.

War Decorations For Women

Foreign countries are not profuse of feminine decorations. There are to all twenty foreign Orders, and it is said that Spain was the first country to honor the gentler sex by including them in Orders of chivalry. The Legion of Honor, which has been planned to not a few feminine recipients in the present war, the Russian Order of St. Catherine, and the Austrian Star Cross are a few of the greater Orders which can be accorded to women. In no country does the decoration bestowed on a woman carry any title, as in the case of a masculine knighthood, but in several countries certain female decorations bestow a sort of status equivalent to rank in the army.

Cowardly Fox of Balkans

King Ferdinand is one of the best-guarded of Sovereigns. Day and night he wears a steel breastplate. When he was Prince of Bulgaria he had a special guard to protect him from a sort of Macedonian Hercules named Christo, whose vigilance and physical vigor were legendary in all the European Courts.

Affairs in Germany are very much worse than the papers lead you to believe, and I am convinced that the war is going to crack up when we least expect it.—Mr. Gordon Selridge, the London retail merchant.

The navy has won the biggest victory of the war.—Mr. Herbert Samuel, M.P.

By taking over munition works entirely we have saved the State nearly $75,000,000.—Mr. Lloyd-George.

Do not suffer from PILES. Dr. Chase's Ointment will relieve you at once. Sold by all druggists. Sample box free if you mention this paper and enclose 5c in postage.

Send where we've read words to this effect: Does it not strike you as peculiar that a strong delegation will go only to the powers that be in Government and ask for the prohibition of liquor or cigarettes without avail; a small number of men go quietly to the same authorities asking for the privilege of making and selling cokes to the country and are successful. Surely it's time for women to stir themselves all over Canada, get the vote and elect the men that are willing to be true to God, Home and Native Land. The woman's vote is the only remedy.

Correcting Kitchener's Manners.

An incident that happened during the South African War is told as a good story concerning General Sir Horace Smith-Dorrien and "K. of K." A somewhat impolite order handed to Sir Horace an important dispatch from Lord Kitchener, and also delivered a verbal message in a manner that was rather brusque. "Say that I will be ready in two hours," replied Sir Horace, "and the next time you speak to me say 'please!'"
