of the prospects in committee take the first clause of the bill and the one considered as offering the least ground for ontention. There are already 170 contention. There are already 170 amendments offered to this clause and are in preparation. Many of straw lace are shown, to be lined with thin slik the color of the custome, and have two pair of narrow ribbon strings it the same color, but varing in shade. The strings are less than an inch in width.

Jackets to be worn on cool days throughout the summer and until October are being made of rough-looking but rich woollen, in ecru, cream or sand color, richly braided with old gold or tarnished gold braid; the braid may be flat or round, or simply twisted. Some of these have the collar and vest of Lincoln green velvet.

Blouce waists with bilts all around, and basque with blouse fronts and gridles are bodices for imported dresses of light fabrics, such as lace gauze, orepeline, India silks and the pretty, old-fashioned lawns that are being revived by French moditees. Full soft draperies over the bust and shoulders is a feature of these waists, and is combined with full or leg of mutton sleeves.

The back of basques is gra/ually becoming much larger, and may be plain or shirred or cut with bias forms. The blouse basques are a compromise between plain and full waists that are found very generally becoming and are seen on both simple and rich dresses. Their blouse reaches only to the waist line, and is singular and rich dresses. Their blouse reaches only to the waist line, and is singular and rich dresses. The newest black lace materials come made of strips of velvet alternating with lace insertions, either of French lace, like Chantilly, or of Marquis or of guipure. These have four or five strips of velvet and the same of lace in each width of goods, which is sold by the yard, like piece lace, and made up in diagonal strips for the apron, and straight-back breadths. Some of the bias surplice fronts have those strips crossing from the right shoulder to the left side of the wairt line, while the back is a basque of straight times.
