

THE MOTHER'S GRAVE.

The evening had been a quiet one. The moon had set, and the stars were shining brightly in the sky. A gentle breeze was blowing from the sea, and the water was calm. The mother and daughter were sitting on the beach, looking out at the sea. The mother was holding the daughter's hand, and they were both looking at the sea with a look of longing and hope.

THE "MISS" MYSTERY.

The Story of a Missing Ship. By LEON LEWIS.

CHAPTER XIII.—(CONTINUED).

The fact was too evident to be ignored. A "water-ram" in the shape of a large beam, was being hurled by a dozen men against the principle door of the edifice. The attention of the father and daughter was now suddenly called to the appearance of a dark form at the grand window of the dungeon—the form of a man who had overpowered the warden, and had climbed up a ladder to this perilous position.

CHAPTER XIV.

OTHER ARRIVALS AT CAPE TOWN. But the Isis was safe!

When Capt. Glugg had rid himself of Jack, Scoter and Glenning—forever, as he supposed—he saw his way clear. "We have lost nothing, Shook," he said to his executive, as they paced the deck together. "This is better than our first project of casting away the clipper. To steal the ship and her cargo is a great improvement upon her destruction."

CHAPTER XV.

JACK ON THE LOOK-OUT.

The truth was, Jack had set up his jury-mast, as proposed, with the aid of his comrades, and he had the wreck of the Archon in Saldanha Bay, where he had safely brought her to anchor. "Our salvage in her is worth at least thirty thousand dollars," he said to his companions, "and it must accordingly be a point with us to keep a sharp eye upon her until she is returned to the hands of her owners. I must hasten to Cape Town, of course, to look after the more important interests of the Isis, but I propose to leave all three of you in charge until my return."

CHAPTER XVI.

THE TRUTH WAS, JACK HAD SET UP HIS JURY-MAST, AS PROPOSED, WITH THE AID OF HIS COMPANIONS, AND HE HAD THE WRECK OF THE ARCHON IN SALDANHA BAY, WHERE HE HAD SAFELY BROUGHT HER TO ANCHOR.

"I shall have to tell you, I see," said Glugg, smilingly. "Our hiding-place is exactly ahead of us." Shook looked long and earnestly in the direction indicated, and then declared: "I don't see the least opening, sir." "Nevertheless there is an opening directly ahead of us. Look at your chart."

THE COMMENTS OF SHOOK AND THE CREW

The comments of Shook and the crew were as many as delighted. "And now for our programme," said Glugg, gravely, as he beckoned the men to gather round him. "We are the Challenger, of London. Having sprung a leak upon the high seas, we have come into Kynias inlet to be down and repair the ship's bottom. This job will require three or six months, as the case may be, and, in the meantime, we are going to have a good time and take things easy. Look around you!"

THE VOYAGE TO MADEIRA, WHERE THE STEAMER CALLED FOR COALS, WAS MADE WITH USUAL DESPATCH, DESPITE SEVERAL DAYS OF ROUGH WEATHER.

The voyage to Madeira, where the steamer called for coals, was made with usual despatch, despite several days of rough weather. And from Madeira to St. Helena the voyage was as delightful as the best of seas and the most favoring winds could make it. Between St. Helena and the Cape the ship encountered a gale of two days' duration; but this event was rather pleasant than otherwise to the couple, as the storm wafted them all the faster upon their way. And so in due course they arrived safely at Cape Town.

THE PLAN THAT WAS SKETCHED WAS ELABORATED DURING THE NEXT FEW DAYS.

The plan that was sketched was elaborated during the next few days succeeding. The pretensions of Jack among the simple inhabitants of the country, and in less than a week the wholeness was so comfortably established that they were in no haste for departure, or for even a division of their booty.

DIPHTHERIA

JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT

It is a well-known fact that the cause of the sore and white patches in the throat is the same as that of the diphtheria. It is a very dangerous disease, and one that will often prove fatal. It is, however, a disease that can be cured. The only cure is by the use of Johnson's Anodyne Liniment. This liniment is a powerful antiseptic, and it will destroy the bacteria that cause the disease. It will also soothe the throat, and it will relieve the pain. It is a very valuable remedy, and it is sold everywhere. It is sold by mail for 50c. In strength. CHARLES PARSONS, 1, S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.
