The Evening Chit-Chat

By MARY CAMERON

"The mind is its own place, and in itself can make a Heaven of Hell, a Hell of Heaven."

happy or unhappy—dissatisfied or contented. You have probably been told that again and again, and having common sense and reason, of your own, knew it anyway.

But let me—or rather, one of my letter friends—present this same philosophy in a more original, newer and more concrete form. I think it will interest and amuse you, as it did me.

"My sister and I," writes this friend, "are rather imaginative, and when we have nothing else to do, we build the most wonderful air castles. Sometimes we merely draw exaggerated word pictures of little happenings."

One afternoon after work we walked home, stopped on our way out for a chat with our married sister, and when we got home found that the rest of the family had finished supper.

We ate ours and repaired to the porch. I plumped down in the hammock and Jane on the porch settee, piled high with pillows. She drew a pathetic picture of the walk up, describing the two poor stenographers toiling weary miles after a hard day's work—the tall, thin, angular, gray-haired one (my hair is gray, but prematurely so) with a half-soiled white skirt that had seen better days, and a white waist that she had spent many weary hours embroidering—the short, dragged-out-looking younger sister in a similar costume. She told how they dragged their weary footsteps to their married sister's flat, where they could smell the supper cooking for her husband when he returned from his day's labor, and after talking for a while proceeded on their journey home. They sat down to the table and partook of a frugal supper of bread and preserves, a bit of lettuce and some lukewarm tea, and then dragging their weary feet to the porch, threw themselves down in utter exhaustion.

You must admit this tale of woe sounds heart-rending. "Then, I said: 'Now listen while I draw the other side of the picture. The two sisters, after leaving their offices, one in a bank, the other in a mercantile office, strolled up town, in the late afternoon, stopping en route for a frappe at the ice cream parlor. The older sister, tall and slender, with a mass of fluffy gray hair, was dressed in a dainty, well-fitting linen skirt and hand-embroidered lingerie waist. The younger one, a short, attractive blonde, was similarly dressed. As the two sisters walked they discussed intelligently Elbert Hubbard, Charles Lamb, and Robert Louis Stevenson. En route they stopped for a moment's chat with their married sister, who sang them an air from one of the operas, while she awaited her husband's homecoming, in anticipation of which she had prepared a dainty supper. Upon their arrival at their own home, they sat down to a tempting supper of lettuce with mayonnaise, preserved peaches and fragrant tea (it wasn't lukewarm at all). The polished table was bare with a drawnwork luncheon square, and bowl of roses and the china was of a dainty gold and white design."

"After supper they repaired to the wide veranda with the rose vines awnings, and rustic sofa and chairs piled with sofa pillows, and while one settled herself down comfortably in the hammock, with a couple of feather pillows under her head, the other plumped the settee high with pillows and curled herself up for a happy evening."

"When finished we both laughed—the pictures were so completely different, yet both were correct in the essentials. I told Jane it only shows what a point of view can do, and she admitted that she was feeling quite sorry for herself when she finished her narrative and that mine cheered her up so that she felt quite happy."

Now, all of us in our thoughts are all the time unconsciously making word pictures of everything that happens to us.

I wonder which kind of word picture you have the mental habit of making—the kind that makes you feel sorry for yourself, or the other kind?

long, slender and of a delicate pattern. Whirls of breast feathers in various tints with high upstanding quill points trim up hats remarkably well.

The new lingerie blouses are to be trimmed with fichus, set up high or the waist and giving the effect of a collar.

Gold and silver tissues are being made into hats for exclusive wear, and the trimmings of antique gold and arch, indeed.

Large hat shapes of velvet in all colors require no trimming but the single plume, and with the French curl at the end.

Feather brushes, intended for the fronts of hats are worn in all colors with a preference for white on black velvet hats.

A chic idea for slippers to elaborate costumes is the use of black Chantilly lace over white satin, or of silver lace over black satin.

In Paris the large hats of white silk beaver, faced with black velvet, are running a race for favor with the small hats of tulle.

In fancy feathers, tall military pompadours are approved, and are worn in marabout, ostrich and coo. White marabout is the current fad.

Trimnings of worsted flowers which threatened to invade our shores and deck our ready-made hats have been severely censured.

Lace gowns trimmed with narrow bands of seal skin have a chic all their own. These tiny bands are used to outline the lace design.

The tinsel cloth shoes of gold and silver continue to be worn with co-tunes of all colors, and for house gowns those of purple velvet are approved.

The kimono shoulder will be worn almost universally by misses, but the new sleeve with the buoyancy below the elbow is seen on some of them.

It is quite a fad to wear hatpins that match the umbrella handle, and it is the blond tortoise-shell, jasper and carnelian sets that are liked best.

There is a perfect craze for platinum. Platinum set with diamonds and pearls is the combination par excellence for those blessed with the purse of Fortune.

Foremost among the revivals of the winter will be the return to favor of our old friend the blouse, which suffered a period of almost total eclipse during the summer.

An idea borrowed from the Russians which has "taken hold" here is the fur-bordered veil of heavy chiffon. These veils are used especially for motoring or sleighing.

Despite the protest against royal purple as a color for hats, because it has lost its exclusive vogue and become "common," the most recent French models are of that color.

Hand-embroidery is the feature that impresses one, in lingerie, from the simplest model showing only a scallop and dots to the most elaborate affair, made of the finest linen or mull.

Both showed signs of punishment and Langford had a marked discoloration and swelling over his right eye. McVey's mouth and nose were bleeding. It was give and take in the tenth, but the eleventh and twelfth rounds were Langford's. McVey's left, which had done considerable execution up to this time, began to lack steam. For the next five rounds the men sparred and a few heavy blows were exchanged. Langford was aggressive but McVey outboxed him. Langford's eye was closed tight, his opponent frequently landing on this shinning mark.

Both were tired and more than cautious in the 19th, and when the bell rang for the 20th they came wearily into the ring almost too exhausted to fight. They clinched throughout this round. All through the fight both men showed gameness and fought with extreme fairness, the crowd showing its appreciation by frequent applause, but the verdict giving the fight to McVey on points was vigorously hooted.

18,000 people witnessed the contest, which took place in the open air under a broiling sun. The betting was 4 to 5, Langford being the favorite. [Early in the present year the pair met in a 20 round bout in Paris and it was called a draw. A majority of the spectators said that Langford was robbed of the award and the pictures of the McVey and Langford battle show that Langford gave McVey a terrible lashing. Since McVey was in America he has developed into a big, strong, clever boxer and one who can assimilate a lot of punishment. He has taken part in quite a few fights in Paris and Australia. Jack Johnson got the decision from him twice in 20 round bouts at Los Angeles in 1902.]

Fortune Telling

Does not take into consideration the one essential to woman's happiness—womanly health. The woman who neglects her health is neglecting the very foundation of all good fortune. For without health love loses its lustre and gold is but dross.

Womanly health when lost or impaired may generally be regained by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

This Prescription has, for over 40 years, been curing delicate, weak, pale, nervous women, by the hundreds of thousands, and this too in the privacy of their homes without their having to submit to indelicate questionings and offensively repugnant examinations.

Sick women are invited to consult Dr. Pierce by letter free. All correspondence held as sacredly confidential. Address World's Dispensary Medical Association, R. V. Pierce, M. D., President, Buffalo, N. Y. DR. PIERCE'S GREAT FAMILY DOCTOR BOOK, The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser, newly revised up-to-date edition—1000 pages, answers in plain English hosts of delicate questions which every woman, single or married, ought to know about. Sent free, in plain wrapper to any address on receipt of 31 one-cent stamps to cover mailing only, or in cloth binding for 50c stamps.

Fads and Fashions.

Earrings are very stylish.

Eyelet-work has a great vogue

The Musceteer handbags are very smart

Bow knots appear as earrings and as corsage knots.

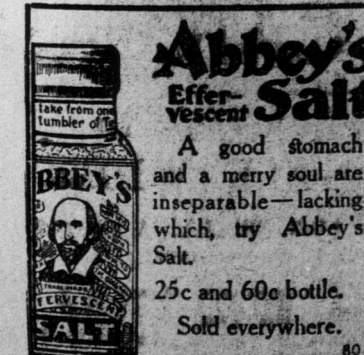

The large gold hats topped with gold-colored or taupe plumes are bewitching.

The new material known as "fausse" abroad is now in great demand for long coats.

One of the newest for hats is the revived tricorn, which now appears as the "Continental."

All designs of needlework are of an open character. Floral effects are not massed closely together.

Every ornament for evening wear is characterized by the pendant craze

THE BONEHEAD.

The bonehead is an individual with a puncture-proof hide and a mind full of holes. There are several kinds of boneheads, but they all have the same quality of brain fibre, which is of the species usually conferred upon the Shropshire ewe. The baseball bonehead always throws to first base to catch the runner at home. The legal bonehead challenges everybody on the jury but the brother of the accused. The medical bonehead operates for appendicitis and leaves a small rip saw and a deep sea sponge in the cavity as tokens of esteem. The dental bonehead builds a bridge where a culvert would do. The business bonehead says it doesn't pay to advertise. The political bonehead distributes personal checks instead of postage stamps. The bonehead never changes his mind, for the reason that everybody wants something to boot. The mental processes of the bonehead are set back some distance from the judge's stand, with the result that he wants to vote on the candidate's application while they are giving the third degree. The social bonehead is getting quite common in our large cities. He generally distinguishes himself by asking some hostess in widow's weeds when her husband got back from the south. This species also has the neat habit of curling one foot behind the other and falling in a genteel crimp in front of the frappe boy. Scientists tell us that the brain of the bonehead is composed of three parts fresh air and one part cold slaw. There are no boneheads in the newspaper profession except the class which play up "the angel of death" on the front page. Boneheads are useful in showing why there is so much room at the top, as that is about all they are topped with.

Going South.

When the s.s. Stephano returns to New York she will at once be made ready for her trip down South. She will visit the West India Islands and points in the Gulf of Mexico. A large number of tourists will go south in the ship and all her state rooms will be occupied. She should leave about the 20th inst., and after returning to New York will come here to outfit for the seal fishery.

Fierce Street Fight.

Last evening two men who are well known to the police and who often appear before the bar, met on George's Street and fought fiercely for some time. When the police appeared one of them vanished but later returned and tried to get his opponent away from the police, who were arresting him. He too was taken in charge, but resisted so violently that he had to be handcuffed before being conveyed to the station.

Take Notice.

We publish simple straight testimonials, not press agents' interviews, from well-known people. From all over America they testify to the merits of MINARD'S LINIMENT, the best of Household Remedies. MINARD'S LINIMENT CO., LIMITED.

It is believed that a new telephone service will be organized here the coming spring. Mr. McLea, who was here from Montreal the past few weeks, had interviews with the Board of Trade, the Anglo-American Co. and the Government on the subject. Mr. McLea, who left for Montreal by the Florizel, will return when the House opens to look for the charter. No doubt there is great room for improvement in the city telephone service. The Anglo Co. do the best possible under existing conditions.
