

Doctor Tells How To Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent In One Week's Time In Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weakness? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many vision cases are failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses. It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discern them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, this drops to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Notes: Another prominent Physician to whom the above medicine was recommended, and who has a very remarkable record, writes: "I have used Bon-Opto in many cases of eye trouble and with good results. The medicine forces nature to its proper strength. It is not a week's time in many instances or even the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist and is one of the very best preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family."

ROYALISTS' HOLIDAY.
The King and Queen have greatly appreciated their quiet stay at York Cottage with their children, especially as they have had the Prince of Wales on leave from the front. He was unable to be home for Christmas, but has greatly enjoyed his subsequent visit, in which he managed to include a couple of days in town with Prince Albert for the theatres.

THE TWO-COURSE RULE.
The quiet regulation limiting customers at hotels and restaurants in this country to two courses for lunch and three for dinner is to be reconsidered. It was not a happy idea, and the regulation has sometimes been used by "proteeters" in a small way. For instance, a certain railway company now serve a lunch consisting of soup, joint and vegetables, and cheese (a course and a half), and explain to any hungry passenger who looks up and is not filled that it is "by Act of Parliament, gentlemen." They do not mention that it would have been quite in accordance with the law if they had thrown in hors d'oeuvres (quantity unlimited) or that they could have given choice of fish and joint and joint and sweets. What is more, they raise the price of this abbreviated lunch from 2s. 6d. (60 cents) to 3s. (75 cents). Passengers should remember that on each course there is nothing but shyness to prevent them from emulating Oliver Twist and asking for more.

RESIGNATIONS OF OFFICERS.
A slight but welcome change in the manner of notifying the resignations of Army officers has been adopted in the "London Gazette." It has been the custom merely to intimate that the officer "relinquishes his commission on account of ill health" without any indication how the disability arose. Under the new form, when the officer has to retire from the service on account of illness arising in the field, the Gazette notice will state that he "relinquishes his commission on account of ill health contracted on active service." The small extension of the formula is calculated to do greater justice to the officer, because it puts on record officially that he has sacrificed his health in the active defence of his country. Another relaxation of the notification of retirement was put into operation a short time ago. It has relation to medical students who took combatant commissions in the earlier stages of the war. Owing to the necessity on public grounds of filling the rank of a depleted medical profession, encouragement had to be given to young men who were already in the final years of the medical curriculum to resume their studies. The susceptibilities of a young officer whose friends were not familiar with the traditional phraseology of Army routine might conceivably be hurt by comments on the bare announcement that he had relinquished his commission. Accordingly, it is now notified in the Gazette that he takes this step "in order to resume medical studies."

A MAN OF MANY PARTS.
William De Morgan, whose death will be mourned as though he were a personal friend by many people all over England, was perhaps the most extraordinary instance of our times of what a man could get out of life. Mentally and physically he developed every part of himself. The richness of his life was characteristic of the Victorian renaissance, when mechanical progress and freedom of thought made all things seem possible before specialism set in in full rigour. A stained-glass worker, a painter, and a maker of tiles—these were his activities up to his fortieth year. He did not claim the invention or re-invention of lustre tiles, but in his own way his lustre work was quite original. He busied himself in mechanics, and invented a duplex gearing for a bicycle actuated pneumatically, a smoke-consuming firegrate, and a refining sieve for clay. He was well over the sixties when he wrote his first book, the famous "Joseph Vance," the first chapter of which is as rich and delightful as anything in Dickens—and much wiser. De Morgan then became a literary celebrity. None of his books may, perhaps, be among the classics, but everyone is the richer for reading them, and no one has presented the thoughtful middle-class life of the last quarter of the nineteenth century with such insight, tenderness, and humour. He lived in the most interesting literary and artistic society of two generations. He loved Italy, and was an annual visitor to Florence. Beauty was a very real thing to him, and it tinged all he did or wrote. He was a very wise old man.

THE S.P.C.K.
In these times of straitened incomes it is interesting to note a passage in the report of the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge that there seems to be some sign that while people are certainly giving more in other directions they are not giving much less for religious purposes. During 1916 the income of the Society has fallen only about 5 per cent. This is, indeed, remarkable, and it shows that people who consistently give financial support to religious organisations must be exercising more and more self-sacrifice in order to be able to spare the money. The S.P.C.K. used to do a great deal for the spiritual welfare of emigrants, but the stream of people seeking a new home beyond the seas does not flow in these days. The workers of the Society, however, are directing their attention to disabled soldiers who are returning to the Overseas Dominions. A sum of $12,500 has been expended during the war in grants for providing devotional literature for soldiers and sailors.

SHORTAGE OF SHOP WOMEN.
There is a great shortage of girls in the largest West End shops and the firms which have sent hundreds of their most assistants into the army now find their women drifting into war work. London newspapers are filled with strings of advertisements both for trained and untrained girls for big West End dry goods stores and most attractive terms are being offered. The clerical staffs have suffered most severely, for the War Office and other departments attract large numbers of girl clerks, and seem on occasion to pay good wages. The women from the showrooms and from behind the counters more often take up something like munition work, and they are nearly as difficult to replace as the clerks, for though the shops have no difficulty in getting extra assistants for the sales—there are hundreds of women formerly in business who like to go back to their old work once or twice a year—these women are not available for permanent work. One big firm has drawn for recruits on the girls of the professional classes and has given them a short emergency business training. Others depend on girls straight from school, who are taken on as ordinary probationers. In all cases the salaries are very much higher than they used to be, and under the system of sales commissions the more competent, experienced saleswomen are able to earn very good money.

MILITARY BRAID IN VOGUE.

The advance spring models in gowns, coats, and even blouses exhibit a decided taste for military braiding and were it not that braiding is quite an art in itself and expert workers are few, we should be on the verge of a braiding vogue. The braided blouse is somewhat of a surprise, rows and rows of military braid being applied on crepe-de-chine. The introduction of military braiding has brought renewed life to the coat-dress garment, which looks like being a permanent addition to the feminine wardrobe. The braided cuirass is another distinctive feature of the spring mode.

Last of the "Placentia's" Crew

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir:—In this morning's News I noticed in the obituary column the death of Mr. Moses Morrissey, of Placentia. It says that he is the last of the famous Morrissey crew. This brings me in fancy to my boyhood days to the happy hours I spent at regattas. I remember the famous Morrissey crew. On regatta day, 1877, the following Morrisseys rowed the "Placentia," built by Mr. Sinfitt, also a native of Placentia, and who steered the "Placentia" to victory. There was Phillip Morrissey, Daniel Morrissey, Patrick Morrissey, John Morrissey and Moses Morrissey, the last named, as the News states, being the last of the Morrisseys. James Whelan, another native of Placentia, was one of the crew. The Placentia crew won the Prince of Wales prize for this race and the names of the boats competing were as follows: Placentia, Queen of Beauty, Volunteer, Native, Orient, Rosetta, and May Glover. Many of your old time readers will remember the brave Placentia crew and the death of Moses Morrissey will bring back memories of the prowess shown on the occasion by the hardy fishermen of Yc Ancient Capital.

I remain, yours truly,
JAMES MURPHY.

Are Well Treated.

Editor Evening Telegram.
Dear Sir:—Kindly publish in justice to the Abitibi Power and Paper Company, also in justice to Mr. Jones of the Seamen's Institute, the following:—
We, the undersigned, since our arrival here nearly two months ago, have received at the hands of this Company every kindness and consideration. The wage paid us is exactly what we expected, while the food is all that could be desired. We send this because of some reports which we have heard from home, reports which we consider an injustice to a Company that have shown us every kindness. By publishing this, Mr. Editor, in your esteemed paper, you would confer a favor on the following:—

But Imitations Only Disappoint

There are many imitations of this great treatment for coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis and whooping cough. They usually have some sale on the merits of the original, but it should be remembered that they are like it in name only.

H. C. OF PAPER.

The men who make the white print paper are trying out a get-rich caper. No pent-up utility contracts the m. and no sane statute counteracts them. They view Ye Printers' protests sourly, and keep on raising prices hourly. At noon they send the price up higher, and laugh to scorn the frenzied buyer; and in the solemn midnight watches, they raise the price a few more notches. There is no reason for this plunder, for doubling prices up like thunder, save that the paper sharks are greedy, and are not loath to strip the needy. From every section of the nation come cries of grief and agitation, from publishers and kindred colonels, who say they must suspend their journals, and take in washing for a 'livin', unless relief to them is given. The paper makers hear the roaring, and see the flood of briny pouring—the storm of wrath around them thickens—and raise the price, to beat the dickens. Before the finish of this winter, we shall behold, methinks, Ye Printer, shorn of his old time smut and chortle, draw near the gloomy soup-house portal, and draw a free and filling ration provided by a weeping nation.

Girls! Have a Mass. of Beautiful Hair, Soft, Glossy, Wavy

25-cent bottle destroys dandruff and doubles beauty of your hair.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.
A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable lustre, softness and luxuriance.
Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it if you will just try a little Danderine.
