The Evening Telegram

St. Thomas's Church.

On last Sunday evening the Rector continued the series of sermons he is preaching under the general heading "Religion in a World at Peace." Three Sunday evenings ago, it will be remembered, he took as his subject: "The Call of the Church to the Man Outside," urging those who though nominal Christians had failed to measure up to their responsibilities, or who were careless, or backsliders, to come forward and become lively members of the Church. The second sermon should have followed on the next Sunday, but for two Sundays Dr. Jones was indisposed, and so it was that it was last Sunday evening was given to the second subject: "The Plea of the Church for the Man who Fought," and it is now hoped that the rest of the series will follow in regular order. Taking as his text some words from 1 Samuel xxi, 3, "What is Under Thy Hand?" the answer to which question was "Bread." Note that the question had been asked before, and the answer given "A Sword." Such a question might have been asked of the men who have fought, any time during the last four years. The answer would have been "A Sword." This sword these men had taken, had used it in accomplishing a great achievement. What was that achievement? It will take generations to judge and measure that achievement in all its bearings upon the world and upon mankind; and probably the men who fought did not realize at all fully what they had achieved. But some results of their work are obvious and would bear recounting in details. The soldiers had made England's word good, in redeeming her promise to defend weak nations; they had destroyed the great illusion that Might is stronger than Right; they had preserved the liberty of the Empire; they had added lustre to the ideals of Christianity; they had saved the world from lapsing into barbarism; they had made England the most desirable ally of other nations; they had exalted the spirit of the world. How should we recognize this? Adequate compensation is out of the question, the slain cannot be recalled to life; many bodies had been broken, the health of many had been seriously impaired. But something could and should be done. The "Bread" of the text was bread of the finest quality, of the most exalted use. So our recognition of the value of our soldiers' work on the battle-fields of Europe must be the best we can give them. Had this sermon been preached two weeks ago, the preacher would have put in a strong plea for the recognition in sensible form of the saving work of our men. Happily, this is not now necessary. He was able to announce, having been given the information by one who was entitled to give it, and who had consented to his announcing it, that educational facilities, and liberal settlements would be afforded all discharged soldiers. To the soldiers he spoke: many of them were present; they had put off khaki, most of them, but only one part of their work had been accomplished when the fighting was ended. They must help—as nobody as well as themselves could help—during the period when the whole social, economic, religious, world was to be newly built up. They must be better Christians and better Churchmen. They were asked not to be impatient with those who had not seen the wonderful things they had seen; but keep their ideals and help the rest of us to attain them. They are to carry on and complete the work so nobly begun on the fields of Europe. A crowded congregation listened with rapt attention to this powerful and eloquent discourse. Next Sunday's subject is "Two Views of Citizenship—Christian and German."

The Cost of the War.
According to the most careful estimates, the total number of lives lost in battle during the great war is 10,097,143 out of nearly 60,000,000 men in arms.
Owing to the fact that the United States army was in the conflict but a comparatively short time, our losses were relatively small, totalling 88,478 killed. They were heavier, however, than those of Belgium or Bulgaria, which are estimated at 50,000 each. The heaviest loser in human life was Russia, with a death total of 3,500,000, before that country withdrew from the war.
The mind is staggered before such figures. In order to visualize a march of the killed, one writer in the New York Tribune points out that marching twenty abreast each day from sunrise to sunset, it would take four months for them to march past a given point. If these men were all put in coffins, and stretched end to end, they would make a line nearly half way around the world at the equator. Or they may be arranged so as to surround a square enclosing so much territory as is contained in the United States and Canada.
And the losses in life make up but a small part of the awful suffering that has been a part of the terrible conflict. There have been 25,000,000 total casualties, including the killed, wounded and prisoners. To this should be added as many more of civilians who have died of starvation and pestilence in various countries.
The property losses are beyond computation. In France alone there are said to be 350,000 homes completely destroyed, to rebuild which would require the labor of two million men for one year. And to make this view up the picture more nearly complete, reference should be made to similar devastations in Belgium, Serbia and Italy. Hundreds of square miles of land was once arable land have been rendered unutilizable by trench and shell-hole.
It is small wonder that the world's leaders are determined to put forth every effort to lay the foundations for lasting peace. Another great war, begun with the intensity that marked the latter stages of this one, would be beyond the power of description.—The Watchman.

"Pizarro" Re-Staged.

Owing to stress of circumstances the Brothers at Mount Castel are compelled to start the work of building the central portion of the new Orphanage as quickly as possible.
Part of the Orphanage has been built but war conditions prevented the work of finishing. It is the present intention to build the central part of the orphanage and the Brothers will make a temporary dwelling there, as their cottage is falling into decay, being one of the oldest buildings in the city. A dwelling house will be erected later.
To aid this work Rev. Bro. Ryan has consented to have Pizarro repeated in the Casino Theatre, on Thursday night next. In addition to the play there will be a concert by the ex-pupils of the College. The C. C. Band will furnish the music.

C. L. B. Memorial.

In view of the general meeting of the C. L. B. Memorial Assoc. to be held on Wednesday 29th, (at which Lt.-Col. R. G. Rendell has kindly consented to take the chair) we would like to call the attention of its friends and supporters, to the object for which it has been formed. It is a Memorial to our brave Church Lads who have sacrificed their lives in the cause of Right in the great war, and is the splendid idea of Lt.-Col. Rendell, and takes the practical form of providing kit and clothing for the C. of E. Orphan boys, who have been formed into a Company of the C. L. B. Some kit has been provided and sewing classes have been started and some clothing made, but the call is so urgent that many more workers are needed if it is to meet with the success hoped for. We feel sure it has the sympathy of all well-wishers of the Brigade, as well as the Orphanage, so we earnestly appeal to all who have this most worthy object at heart to attend the meeting.
