

worked exactly as in the field. He goes on to say that "On Friday next, October 14th, will be presented the celebrated comedy of A. Bull Strokes for a Husband, and at the end of the play Mr. Dobbs will exhibit two machines of different powers and purposes, for cutting down corn, sugar cane, &c.; to conclude with the celebrated farce of Fortune's Follies, the part of Robin Roushead by Mr. Dobbs, in which he will work the machine in character, in an artificial field of wheat, planted as near as possible to the manner in which it grows." In 1822 Mr. Henry Ogle of Rennington, near Alnwick, invented a machine for reaping corn, to which, in the same year, an apparatus for collecting the corn into sheaves was added by Messrs. Thomas and Joseph Brown, of Alnwick. This appears to be the first reaper constructed to lay the corn in sheaves. Messrs. Brown then advertised they had machines ready for use for cutting and sheaving corn, but not one person could be found to purchase. After this some working people threatened to kill Mr. Brown if he persevered any further, so that he was obliged to give it up, although he proved to several of the farmers the machine would cut a large quantity in a day. The machine invented by the Rev. Patrick Bell was one that made a great stir, and in 1825 this machine was publicly worked, and was admired by all who saw it. After this there was not much improvement in the machine till the Exhibition of 1851, from whence sprung our present modern machines.
