GREY ADDRESSES THE COMMONS ON THE MOROCCAN INCIDENT

The British Foreign Secretary Says Germany Departed From Diplomatic Procedure in Disclosing Contents of Conversations -Explains Action Which Almost Led to War.

[Canadian Press.]

London, Nov. 27.—Sir Edward Grey, secretary for foreign affairs, steared the political atmosphere and poured oil on the turbulent waters of Anglo-German relations in a speech lasting an hour and a half in the House of Commons this afternoon.

The foreign secretary reviewed the whole Moroccan episode from the sudden appearance of the German gunboat Panther in the port of Agadir in Southern Morocco up to the signing of the Franco-German treaty. He unflinchingly upheld the attitude taken by the British Government, but at or to any settlement she was able to arrange with France, and which did not threaten the rights of Great Britain.

Sir Edward Grey made no secret of the fact that the situation had at one time been very tense, but thought his statements today would prove a vedaive to a world which had been indulging in a fit of political alcoholism. and that the time had arrived for it to get and to keep cool and sober.

And that the time had arrived for it to get and to keep cool and sober.

London, Nov. 27.—Sir Edward Grey delivered his anxiously-awaited speech on the international political situation in the House of Commons this afternoon. He declared that the statement of Herr Von Kiderlen-Waechter, the German foreign secretary, was incomplete, and therefore it was necessary for him to make a fuller statement of the part taken by the British foreign office before the House of Commons.

The place will have to undergo a thorough sweeping and cleaning before the stuff can be gotten rid of, as it is impossible for anyone to stay in the room for any length of time without coughing and choking.

Many of the children got the pepper in their eyes, and suffered considerably as a result.

Forgot The Letter For Two Years

It is a well-known fact that if you give a man, a married man in particular, a letter to post, it is a safe bet that he will forget to drop it in the box for at least three days after the letter has been given him. Some men have been known to forget the matter for a week, while a case has been heard of where a man forget for a whole month to post the letter that "wifey" ad given him with strict instructions to drop it into the first mail box.

However, these cases are only mild affairs to that of the man on Queen's avenue, in East London, who recently discovered a letter in his pecket that he was given to post nearly two years and two months ago. The letter was given him by a lady staying at his house at the time, and was addressed to her husband in the West.

Mr. Man was intrusted to post it, and carefully placing it in his pocket, he immediately forget all about it. The coat was worn out, and laid aside. The letter still reposed in the inside pocket. The lady went away, and returned a year later. The letter was forgotten until only last week, the man had occasion to hunt up his old coat. While searching through the pockets, the unposted letter was discovered. A little later a man stole silently out of the house and made for the nearest letter box. With a suilty look on his face, he dropped the two-year-old epistle in, and breathing a sigh of relief, returned home egain.
