Questions." "Primarily and abstractas men go on in that fighting way edly considered, the relationship a Christian minister should have to any and all public questions, is answered by the nature and energy of the forces involved in the divine deposit committed to his special custody as a minister of the Gospel," said Mr. Mc-Kenze in commencing his address. He pointed out that in the oGspel God had revealed all that was necessary for the eradication of evil in the world and the solution of all problems, and that view of the subject rendered unnecessary any discussion as to whether the minister had relations to public questions. The "how" of the subject was more difficult, he asserted, as these questions required a great amount of study, and ministers were busy men. Such considerations might excuse a minister form refraining in a measure from dealing with these questions, but left untouched by the clergy they were likely to be answered incorrectly. Would Preach Gospel.

A most interesting discussion followed the paper read by Mr. McKenzie. Rev. John Hosie expressed himself as being questions in the pulpit. Out of 168 hours each week a minister had only two hours in the pulpit, and he thought that time should be spent in preaching the gospel them He felt that the divorcing of the working classes from the church was due in a large measure to this very thing-that they did not hear the gospel preached. "I should view the intrusion of even a burn. in course of training as a professional ing question of the hour, a loss to the incendiary by miscreants worse than great work," he said. Several other ministers present spoke briefly, upholding his views. Rev. W. R. McIntosh thought differently, saying that he considered it an advantage to modernize the gospel and apply its teachings directly in dealing with the great questions of the day. Rev. Mr. Boyd and several others also spoke in this strain. At the close of the discussion, Rev. T B. Clarke gave a brief address, thanking the members for the kindness shown them during the time that he had been President of the Aliance. He also paid a tribute to Rev. R. Whiting and Dr. Manning, whom, he said, would be leaving the city before the next meeting in September. On motion by Mr. McIntosh, seconded by Mr. Hosie, that a picnic be held at Springbank during the second week in June, at which the members of the Aliance would have an opportunity to express their appreciation of the retiring Mr. H. BERTON BRALEY "Speakin' of fishes," said the Tar, "Speakin' of fishes, near an' far, There once was a gentleman shark, I knowed As swallowed our anchor fer a hook An' when he seen what a bite he'd took Went hikin' off through the sea, an' towed That ship along like a bloomin' chip, Though she was a regular monster ship. He towed her backwards, mile on mile, Though the engines fought him all the while; He towed her over the heavin' foam; He towed her into the pier at home, An' then with many a bump an' shock He towed that vessel upon the dock; He towed her up through the city street At a pace that a race horse couldn't beat; He towed her over the vale an' hill An' he never stopped a bit until The screw got caught in a spreadin' oak An' the anchor chain an' the hawser broke, But the shark kep' on with a grim intent, Though I never did learn where the monster went, There was silence awhile in the village bar As a tribute mute to the bold Jack Tar, An' it looked like the palm would sure be his Till old Bill Jackson said, "Gee whiz! I kin tell you just where yer big fish is; An' I know the tale that you tell is true, 'Cause I caught that shark as he hove in view An' I got him stalled in the stable now An' I use the critter to help me plow." Then the old Tar rose an' he said, said he. "By the Great Horn Spoon, that sure beats me." Then his face grew pale and he gave a start And he fell and died-of a broken heart.
