

CARAMOUCHE

by Rafael Sabatini

(Continued From Our Last Issue.)

Andre-Louis observed the ashen pallor that now overspread the face of his opponent.

"I think you begin to realize, monsieur, what Philippe de Vilmorin must have felt that day at Gavillae. I desired that you should first do so. Since that is accomplished, why here's to make an end!"

He went in with lightning rapidity. For a moment his point seemed to La Tour d'Azyr to be everywhere at once, and then from a low engagement in sixte, Andre-Louis stretched forward with swift and vigorous ease to lunge in tierce. He drove his point to transfuse his opponent with a series of calculated disengagements uncovered in that line. But to his amazement and chagrin La Tour d'Azyr parried the stroke; infinitely more to his chagrin La Tour parried it just too late. Had he completely parried it, all would yet have been well. But striking the blade in the last fraction of a second, the Marquis deflected the point from the line of his body, yet not so completely that a couple of feet of that hard-driven steel tore through the muscles of his sword-arm.

To the seconds none of these details had been visible. All that they had seen had been a swift whirl of flashing blades, and then Andre-Louis stretched almost to the ground in an upward lunge that had pierced the Marquis' right arm just below the shoulder.

The sword fell from the suddenly relaxed grip of La Tour d'Azyr's fingers, which had been rendered powerless, and he stood now disarmed, his lip in his teeth, his face white, his chest heaving, before his opponent, who had at once recovered.

With the blood-tinged tip of his sword resting on the ground, Andre-Louis surveyed him grimly, as he surveyed the prey that through our own clumsiness has escaped us at the last moment.

In the Assembly and in the newspapers this might be hailed as another victory for the Paladin of the Third Estate; only himself could know the extent and the bitterness of the failure.

Andre-Louis at last roused himself, sighed, and turned away to resume his garments and left the ground at once.

As, with La Chapelier, he was walking slowly and in silent dejection toward the entrance of the Bois, where they had left their car, he was passed by the Marquis conveying La Tour d'Azyr and his second.

And thus it was that he was the first to return, and seeing him thus returning, apparently safe and sound, the two ladies, intent upon preventing the encounter, should have assumed that their worst fears were realized.

Mme. de Plougastel attempted to call out, but her voice refused its office. She attempted to throw open the door of her own carriage; but her fingers fumbled clumsily and ineffectively with the handle. She found her voice at last, and at the same moment signalled to the driver of the calèche to stop.

"Mademoiselle de Keradiou is with me. The poor child has fainted." Moved by a deep solicitude for Mademoiselle de Keradiou, de La Tour d'Azyr sprang up despite his wound.

And thus it happened that when a few moments later that approaching cabriolet overtook and passed the halted vehicles, Andre-Louis beheld a very touching scene. Standing up to obtain a better view, he saw Aline in a half-swooning condition—she was beginning to revive by now—seated in the doorway of the carriage, supported by Mme. de Plougastel. In an attitude of deepest concern, M. de La Tour d'Azyr, his wound notwithstanding, was bending over the girl, whilst, behind him stood M. d'Ormesson and the madame's footman.

Amazed, he cried aloud, "What must she have suffered, then, if I had killed him as I intended!"

If only she had used candor with him, she could so easily have won his consent to the thing she asked. If only she had told him what now he saw, that she loved M. de La Tour d'Azyr.

CHAPTER X

M. DE LA TOUR D'AZYR seen no more in the Manege—or indeed in Paris at all.

ALL THAT THEY HAD SEEN HAD BEEN A SWIFT WHIRL OF FLASHING BLADES.

relaxed grip of La Tour d'Azyr's fingers, which had been rendered powerless, and he stood now disarmed, his lip in his teeth, his face white, his chest heaving, before his opponent, who had at once recovered.

With the blood-tinged tip of his sword resting on the ground, Andre-Louis surveyed him grimly, as he surveyed the prey that through our own clumsiness has escaped us at the last moment.

In the Assembly and in the newspapers this might be hailed as another victory for the Paladin of the Third Estate; only himself could know the extent and the bitterness of the failure.

Andre-Louis at last roused himself, sighed, and turned away to resume his garments and left the ground at once.

As, with La Chapelier, he was walking slowly and in silent dejection toward the entrance of the Bois, where they had left their car, he was passed by the Marquis conveying La Tour d'Azyr and his second.

And thus it was that he was the first to return, and seeing him thus returning, apparently safe and sound, the two ladies, intent upon preventing the encounter, should have assumed that their worst fears were realized.

Mme. de Plougastel attempted to call out, but her voice refused its office. She attempted to throw open the door of her own carriage; but her fingers fumbled clumsily and ineffectively with the handle. She found her voice at last, and at the same moment signalled to the driver of the calèche to stop.

"Mademoiselle de Keradiou is with me. The poor child has fainted." Moved by a deep solicitude for Mademoiselle de Keradiou, de La Tour d'Azyr sprang up despite his wound.

And thus it happened that when a few moments later that approaching cabriolet overtook and passed the halted vehicles, Andre-Louis beheld a very touching scene. Standing up to obtain a better view, he saw Aline in a half-swooning condition—she was beginning to revive by now—seated in the doorway of the carriage, supported by Mme. de Plougastel. In an attitude of deepest concern, M. de La Tour d'Azyr, his wound notwithstanding, was bending over the girl, whilst, behind him stood M. d'Ormesson and the madame's footman.

Amazed, he cried aloud, "What must she have suffered, then, if I had killed him as I intended!"

If only she had used candor with him, she could so easily have won his consent to the thing she asked. If only she had told him what now he saw, that she loved M. de La Tour d'Azyr.

He went in with lightning rapidity. For a moment his point seemed to La Tour d'Azyr to be everywhere at once, and then from a low engagement in sixte, Andre-Louis stretched forward with swift and vigorous ease to lunge in tierce. He drove his point to transfuse his opponent with a series of calculated disengagements uncovered in that line. But to his amazement and chagrin La Tour d'Azyr parried the stroke; infinitely more to his chagrin La Tour parried it just too late. Had he completely parried it, all would yet have been well. But striking the blade in the last fraction of a second, the Marquis deflected the point from the line of his body, yet not so completely that a couple of feet of that hard-driven steel tore through the muscles of his sword-arm.

To the seconds none of these details had been visible. All that they had seen had been a swift whirl of flashing blades, and then Andre-Louis stretched almost to the ground in an upward lunge that had pierced the Marquis' right arm just below the shoulder.

The sword fell from the suddenly relaxed grip of La Tour d'Azyr's fingers, which had been rendered powerless, and he stood now disarmed, his lip in his teeth, his face white, his chest heaving, before his opponent, who had at once recovered.

With the blood-tinged tip of his sword resting on the ground, Andre-Louis surveyed him grimly, as he surveyed the prey that through our own clumsiness has escaped us at the last moment.

In the Assembly and in the newspapers this might be hailed as another victory for the Paladin of the Third Estate; only himself could know the extent and the bitterness of the failure.

Andre-Louis at last roused himself, sighed, and turned away to resume his garments and left the ground at once.

JACK DAW'S ADVENTURES

AFTER WALKING FOR MILES, JACK AND HIS FAITHFUL DOG WERE VERY TIRED. THEY STOPPED AT A GOOD SPOT ALONG THE ROAD, AND DECIDED TO TAKE A REST.

JACK WAS GLAD HIS MOTHER PROVED HIM SUCH A GOOD LUCKY DOG. HE FOUND TWO STICKS AND RUBBED THEM TOGETHER AND STARTED A FIRE.

THEN HE DECIDED TO PITCH CAMP FOR THE NIGHT. SO HE BUILT A SHELTER OUT OF TREE BRANCHES AND LEAVES, AND PREPARED FOR A GOOD NIGHT'S SLEEP.

A PIERCING SCREAM AWAKENED JACK FROM HIS SLUMBERS. HE SAT UP WITH A START AND DISCOVERED A PAIR OF GLEAMING EYES SHINING OUT OF THE DARKNESS.

Fashions—Black Velvet Bathing Suits

BEING decoratively aquatic is no trick at all this season. All the shop windows join in telling one how to do it.

Velvet and silk crepe are the newest materials for bathing suits. The plain black velvet jumper slip to be pulled on over bathing tights is very popular and has a sash usually of some brilliant color.

Heavy silk crepe trimmed with bands of black velvet is also shown and in a variety of colors.

Perhaps the sexiest bathing suit ever made to decorate a beach is the full-skirted one of red and white gingham-checked taffeta. It has no trimming and can't really be said to need any.

Radio Radiations

BY THE RADIO EDITOR.

FIXED condensers are indispensable in experimental work with radio. To construct them with tinfoil, paper, copper and mica usually takes considerable time. Unless one has had some experience, the method is clumsy.

There is an easier way and one fully as effective.

If two conductors, regardless of their shape, are separated by an insulator or by air they will possess electro-static capacity. The greater their area the greater this capacity.

Condensers which are suitable for the grid condenser of the vacuum tube, the "retro-pipe" condenser of the crystal detector set, the telephone "by-pass" condenser in the vacuum tube set, and even the fixed condensers in the antenna circuits of the receiver may be made by winding two parallel wires on a small tube or spool. To prevent clumsiness where a fairly large value of capacity is required the wire may be put on in several layers.

After the winding is in place, dry out the whole by placing tin a warm oven for a few minutes, and then coat quickly with thick shellac or insulating varnish.

Two pieces of No. 25 double cotton-covered copper wire six feet in length wound side by side on the form will provide a fixed condenser suitable for many uses.

RADIO PRIMER.

HETERODYNE. — Production of undamped electric oscillations in the receiving circuit of nearly the same frequency as that of the waves which are being received. The combined action of both these frequen-

GRANTON

Special to London Advertiser.

GRANTON, July 13.—The services in the Methodist Church last Sunday were well attended. In the morning Miss Sherritt gave an address on missions in the Sabbath school, and eight little Italian girls from Toronto, under the management of Miss Woolvil, sang several songs.

In the evening Rev. Hunter, the new pastor, delivered a special sermon to the Orangemen.

The unveiling of the soldiers' memorial will take place next Wednesday, July 19. A splendid program and supper is being prepared. The school children all over the township are being invited.

Miss Clara Wallace has been engaged as teacher for the public school after the holidays.

Miss Edith Langford has been engaged to teach at Dinsmore School in Blanshard.

A large number from here attended the unveiling services at Rannock, when the soldiers' beautiful monument was unveiled. Addresses were given by Col. Campbell of London, Capt. Patterson, Rev. Father Dolan and Mrs. Patterson.

The hay crop has been about all gathered in. The fall wheat is just ready to cut, and is a good crop. Barley is very heavy, and a lot of fields are laying flat on the ground. Oats are a heavy crop and will be hard to cut. A lot of sweet clover was cut for feed, and others filled their silos with it, and yet there is a large quantity left for seed. Corn, potatoes and roots, owing to the rainy weather the past month, are looking splendid. There is fruit in abundance in this district, including plums, pears and all kinds of apples.

WABASH

Special to London Advertiser.

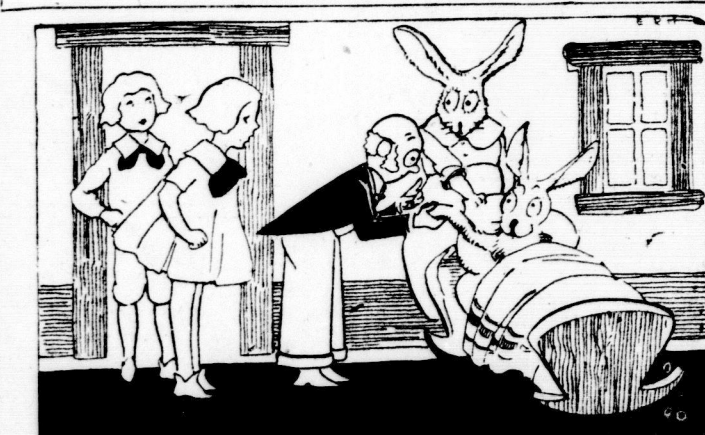

WABASH, July 13.—Dr. and Mrs. Norman Liberty of Porcupine, and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Liberty of daughter Margaret of Wallaceport, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Liberty.

Miss Evangeline Bains has resigned her position as teacher of the Wabash Public School, and will be succeeded by Miss Marie Leeson of Croton.

At the last Epworth League service the topic, "The Home Christian," was taken by the pastor's wife, Mrs. Hazlewood.

DR. SNUFFLES CURES ANOTHER

[By Olive Roberts Barton.]

"Yes," he said gravely, with a queer look at Cutie, "he's dreadfully sick."

ONE morning Mrs. Cottontail telephoned Dr. Snuffles, the fair-haired doctor, when Nancy and Nick were helping.

"I wish you'd stop in and see Cutie," she begged. "He's dreadfully sick and can't go to school."

So Dr. Snuffles hurried right over without eating the nice breakfast Nancy had fixed for him.

There lay Cutie, rolling over and over, and moaning and groaning. Dr. Snuffles looked at Cutie's tongue. Then he felt Cutie's pulse, and put a big thermometer into his mouth.

"Yes," said he gravely with a queer look at Cutie, "he's dreadfully sick. You'll have to pull down all the blinds and close all the doors and leave him quite by himself. He must not see anybody at all! And above everything else he

Don't Spoil Your Child's Hair By Washing It

When you wash your child's hair, be careful what you use. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain Mulsified coconut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Mulsified in a cup or glass with a little warm water, then moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.

You can get Mulsified at any drug store, and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure you get Mulsified. Beware of imitations. Look for the name Watkins on the package.—Advt.

A real cough remedy

Don't surrender to an obstinate cough. There's a remedy that will help you conquer it—a remedy that speedily relieves all irritation of the respiratory organs and gives bodily strength for permanent cure. Try it—ask your druggist or dealer for—

Robert's
Cough Syrup
Cod Liver Oil & Talc

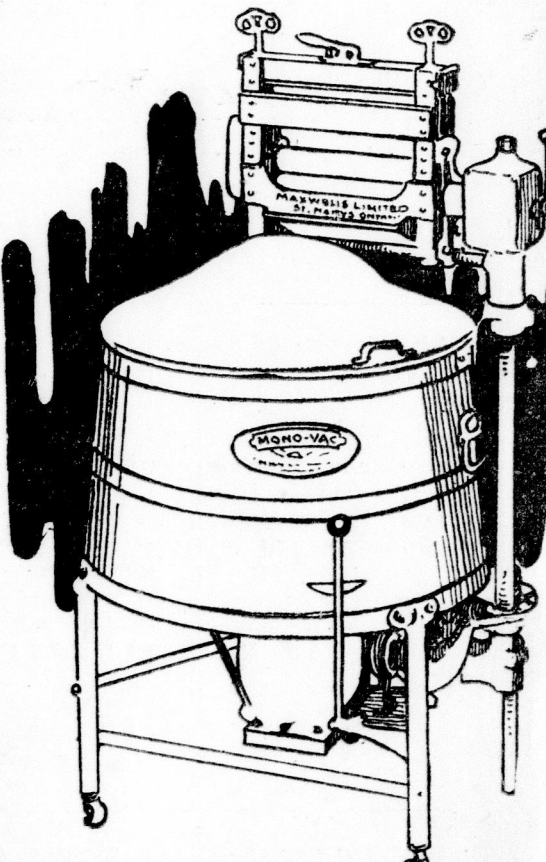

About Your Health—

If you have been a victim of circumstances, which have compelled you to submit to the antiquated method of the washboard, remember you cannot bring back the bloom of youth to your cheeks, bring back your lost or youthful appearance. You should not let another wash-day take further toll of your health and happiness.

The Maxwell Electrics are ready, at a trifling cost per minute for power, to take the burden off your shoulders and bring happiness a-plenty into your home.

$5.00

Delivers a Mono-Vac to your home—$2.00 weekly keeps it there. Isn't your health worth more than this?

CLIP COUPON HERE

Without obligation mail me free a copy of "The Dawn of a Brighter Washday."

Mrs. _____

MONO-VAC
THE CUPS THE THING

The "MONO-VAC" Electric Washer and Wringer has distinctive features. The one large Vacuum Cup operates on all the clothes at once, pressing the air and suds through the clothes on the downward stroke, thus creating a vacuum and lifting the water by suction back through on the upward stroke, cleansing rapidly and without wear or tear the finest of fabrics and washing blankets and heavy pieces equally well.

SOLE AGENTS--

THOMAS

Phone 5616

240 Dundas St.

(Copyright, 1922.)