No doubt it is still without it, as it has never appeared in its columns. The one produced in our columns is not copyrighted and will remain in being copied in the Tribune. In fact, we hereby offer him the loan of the article in type, to save him the trouble and expense of setting it in type and to give them the true facts of the case.

ESTABLISHED 1880
KILLED MAN WHO RUINED HIS WIFE.

Made Him Signs Confess of His Guilt Then Shot Him.
THE TEXAS WAY.

PORT WORTH, TEXAS, Mar. 11.—Fred Morris, a baseball player, shot and instantly killed E. Meyer, a man in a local hotel, after obtaining a written confession of relations with Mrs. Morris's property.

The two men came to the hotel together and were assigned to the room. Shortly after they had the shot were heard. Meyer was found lying in a pool of blood. Morris, upon the approach of the authorities, calmly announced, "I am the man you are looking for. I think the police need me."

After he and Meyer had been taken to the police station, Morris declared he read the confession to Meyer, who signed it. Meyer was taken to the hospital and died there.

Meyer's wife, Mrs. Morris, was taken to the hospital and died there. She was found with a bullet wound in her chest.
