Uncle Josh at the Grand. The Grand was well filled last night to welcome good, kind Uncle Josh back to Toronto, and the audience was moved from fits of laughter to tears, as it always is, at the venerable old farmer's eccentricities and pathos. The company in support of this favorite has been in many ways improved since its last visit to the city and is now one of the most evenly balanced or ranizations on the road. A complaint used to be made that this was not the case and therefore an announcement of the change affords a double pleasure. Uncle Josh remains at the Grand for the balance of the week, giving a matinee to-morrow. A simple announcement of the fact is enough to secure him crowded houses.
