which belongs to the infernal. There have been crimes, crimes of passion, whereby men have been carried away, which have been crimes, crimes of passion, whereby dent from derangement of the domestic hot water system. The careful housekeeper, though cheered by the advent of seasonable weather, with clean roads, and clear, crisp atmosphere, yet regards the kitchen boiler with anxiety, and not without reason, for explosions of household boilers and pipes become numerous. In some instances explosion is so dreaded that the kitchen fire is put out until the frost is over, an inconvenience and discomfort needing no comment. When, however, we consider the disastrous effects of explosion on the one hand and the exceedingly simple means by hand and the exceedingly simple means by which safety can be insured, it seems marwhich safety can be insured, it seems marvelous that persons should run, year by year, the risks they do, when at trifling cost immunity from danger can be secured.

There is no mystery about these boiler explosions; they simply occur from over-pressure of steam arising from the outlets.

The immediate cause of disaster is that, during the hight, the pipes leading into the boiler become frozen; and on the fire being relighted in the morning steam is generated, which, being unable to escape, increases in pressure until explosion results. creases in pressure until explosion results. It cannot be too emphatically pointed out, or too repeatedly insisted on, that the timekeeper by the council to look after the remedy for all such disasters is to provide clocks of the city suggests the query, every boiler with a reliable safety-valve, Why cannot the clocks be run by which shall relieve the pressure of steam before the ultimate strength of the boiler is approached. Into the question of the particular make of safety-valve most suitable for the purpose we do not propose to enter. Many excel-papers of this morning are not delivered in New York until the next afternoon, while the Montreal dailies are delivered early the following morning. A correspondent in the paper also asks why it takes five hours to reach Toronto from Buffalo, while New York can be reached from Buffalo in 8½ hours. As to the first question it is worthy of the attention of our postal authorities; the second question revives a matter brought up by The World every few months, namely, that it is high time the Grand Trunk people rise to the requirements of the situation and put on a fast solid train service via Burlington Beach between Toronto and Buffalo. Now if Mr. Seargeant of the Grand Trunk is anxious to distinguish himself he has here an excellent opportunity.

Here a correspondent in ridge drums. In the first place the drumming is not done when the bird is excited, as the least noise or excitement causes an immediate cessation of drumming. The noise is caused by the wing feathers, being kept perfectly rigid and striking on a hard substance like a log or rock, which is always worn smooth by the contact. The same noise is produced by the common barnyard turkey dropping his wings on the ground. This peculiar drum-like sound is caused by the hollowness of the quills, not of the object on which they strike. I have on more than one occasion for several minutes watched a cock partridge drumming, and know whereof I speak.

The emotional girls, who in their description used such adjectives as "beautiful," "lovely," "sweet," etc., showed a deficiency in more valuable traits of character, and it would seem that in these cases emotion superseded thought. These tests would, The World believes, prove valuable if made in every school, and we are inclined to think that if it were possible to extend this system of tests to the higher intellectual faculties and thus supersede the ordinary competitive examination method of selecting candidates for public appointments we should emotional girls, who in their description didates for public appointments we should have fewer square pegs in round holes.

Does this failure indicate that the pictures were unlike those for whom they were intended? Or are the police unintelligent members of the human family? We are inclined to think that the explanation of the problem may be found in an unexpected direction. The photographs, as a matter of fact, give a reversed image of the sitter. This he does not detect himself, for he is used to see his face thus reversed every time he looks in a mirror. But such a liisuress—and such likenesses often form the original from which copies are multiplied for police use—conveys a very different idea to the conveys a very different idea to the stranger. A Monster of Iniquity.

Among the terrible criminals whom present day abnormalism has developed as prey for the public executioner and food for the morbid, Thomas Neill takes a leading place. He is a menster who, when at liberty, went about only to destroy, and he has left behind him on two continents a trail of murder dreadful to dwell upon. The calm brutality of Wainwright, the innate ferocity of Williamson, the Radcliffe highway assassin, the bloody itinerary of Deeming, and even the fearful but-Deeming, and even the fearful butcheries of Jack the Ripper sink into second place beside the operations of this artist in murder, who can be contemplated only with a shudder. The main points in a safety-valve are that it should be simple in construction, with as few wasting parts as possible; should not easily get out of order; should act readily at all times; and should be so placed that it can be inspected without difficulty from time to time.
