LANDED A MANEATER.

A Chicagoan's Capture of a 1000-Pound Shark in Florida. Arthur J. Kirkwood, recently back from his place at Fort Worth, Fla., gives the following account of his capture of a man-eating shark and points to a big photograph of the same as corroborative testimony:

"I was fishing for bluefish in from seven to ten feet of water at the end of my dock, which runs about eighty feet into Lake Worth, when there came a tug that took line and all away. Then I loaded for bear, or in other words, baited for shark with a five-eight-inch line with three feet of iron chain at the end and a large cork baited with a bluefish. The weight of the chain sank the bait to the bottom. To seize his prey the shark must turn on his back. When the prey lies at the bottom the shark just tosses it up with his nose, something like a greyhound killing a rabbit, then snatches and runs off with it. This shark did this and ran the line out taut, but I held him. It took seven of us to haul him to the shore, where he was shot through the head, dying as quickly as a pig, and then it took all our united strength to haul him up to a beam to have him photographed. He was a regular man-eater, weighed over 1100 pounds, and had three rows of big sharp teeth. The look had stuck in his jaw, and his skin, which is tougher than the toughest leather, had presented him from breaking away.

"It was the first time such a large shark had been captured in Lake Worth, which is an arm of the sea. The seven-mile-long peninsula, on which the hotels and private residences stand, runs between the lake, as it is called, and the Atlantic Ocean. Scores of sharks may be seen any day at the inlet from the ocean to the lake. This fellow was caught two and one-half miles inland from the inlet. There were two pilot fish, the sharks' constant companions, hanging to him when he was caught—fellows from eighteen to twenty-four pounds weight, attached to his body by the suction plates of their jaws.

"There are three kinds of sharks known at Lake Worth—the man-eater, the shore-nosed, and the blue shark. The last two are harmless, and the man-eater is considered harmless there also, for he has plenty of fish to eat, and hasn't been known to hunt for human tit-bits.

"Lake Worth is a very fine, pretty, healthy place, and has become very popular with Chicago people. George E. Davis, George R. Swift, and others from here have nice residences along the lake. Since Flagler, the Standard Oil millionaire, built his railroad direct from Jacksonville property has boomed marvellously. Land that went at $35 to $50 a acre a short time ago now sells at $1500. It is a beautiful resort, and I am deeply in love with it.

"Mr. Kirkwood's house on Wellington avenue is full of trophies and tokens of that part of Florida. Sharks' fins and saccos hang on the wall, and a number of lively chumaleons skip about and match flies among the geraniums on the windows.

Divorce Made Easy.
In Egypt divorces come even easier than in Dakota. Our consul to the court of the Khedive tells of an instance that took place between one of his most trusted servants and a veiled lady, his wife, which squabble resulted in divorce in less than five minutes. The woman opened with reproaches emanating from the woman. "Take care," warned the man. "I put you from me!" Nothing daunted, the virago continued until the exasperated man again repeated, "I put you from me." Still the torrent of abuse flowed unceasingly. Worried beyond endurance, the servant entered the house and secured 20 shillings out of his year's salary of £10 and returning to the woman said: "Here is your dowry—now for the third and last time I repeat: 'I put you from me.'" At these words the woman went her way and the astonished American learned that he had witnessed divorce proceedings, for in Egypt the assertion, "I put you from me," made three times to a wife by her husband, constitutes a solemn divorce without alimony, and once the words are said the woman has no right to any further support from the man.—Omaha Bee.

A Matter of Death.
Kind Lady—I see a little girl and her little brother crying over there. Do you know what is the matter?
Little Miss—The little girl is crying because some bad boys tied a tin can to a poor dog's tail. I don't know what the little boy is crying for. Mobley 'cause he didn't get there in time to see it.

If you are dependent, low spirited, irritable and nervous, and unpleasant sensations are felt invariably after meals, get a bottle of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. You will give you relief. You have heard of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Mr. H. Dawson, St. Marks, writes: "Four bottles of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cured me of my nervous condition. I was one of the worst cases; I now feel like a new man."

WONDERS OF THE HUMAN LUNGS.

Six Hundred Million Air Cells Aid in Purifying the Blood.

The importance of the lungs as a means of purification of the blood and of promoting the general welfare of the human organism may be inferred from their protection, so nearly surrounded by strong bony structures. The same may be inferred from their constant action, without a minute's vacation, ordinarily, at any one time, from the dawn of life till its close.

Nor are these five lobes servants, in their general capacity, controlled by mental influences—will power—but continue their activity whether we are awake or asleep, whether we are sensible or insensible—managing their own affairs. Their appropriate mission is the supply of pure air to the system, the most important design of which is its purification, carrying all particles of impure and dead matter, which are ever accumulating as the result of age and the exercise of the organic functions.

To effect this very important result, this purification of a body constantly becoming impure, or, necessarily, there are 600,000,000 (by estimate) of air cells, all of these being more or less inflated by each breath. As small as these must be, it is estimated that the outer surface of each has an average of five minute blood vessels, containing the blood from the general system sent there for revitalizing, that it may continue to sustain and care for the body.

The theory is that the iron in the blood attracts the oxygen of the breath through the membranes, resulting in an actual combustion, burning waste matters, and, in this way, sustaining the warmth of the body, our clothing doing nothing in this regard, beyond regulating the escape of the heat thus produced, and preventing the natural ingress of the cold from without. After the burning of these refuse matters—by which a deadly gas is produced, as in all combustion, which, with what we may call ashes, are drawn through those membranes, entering the air cells, soon to be thrown out by the expired breath, as this gas is particularly poisonous to the lungs.

That such impurities may not be re-breathed they ascend, being lighter than the cool air, till the poison gas becomes cool, when it falls to the surface of the earth, where it is absorbed as one of the most important of the fertilizers, vegetation being sustained more in its work of purifying the air than by the soil.

The average capacity of the lungs of a full-sized man is about one gallon, though only about one-half of the air is thrown out at any one time, the rest remaining, aiding in the purification of the body.

It is estimated that the lungs are supplied annually with 100,000 cubic feet of air, breathing 7,000,000 times, purifying 3500 tons of blood. In view of such a stupendous amount of toil performed by the lungs, with the importance of this purification of the body, without which health and life can be continued but a short time, it is of the utmost importance that we have a generous supply of pure air, while the natural supply would be sufficient, probably, if the population of the earth should be increased a hundredfold, particularly since the vegetable world is constantly employed in its purification. We have simply to open our doors and windows, freely breathing our part, in doing which we shall not rob our neighbors.—Boston Traveler.

The Swell Salute.
The very latest fashion in uncovering the head; as a salute, has reached Boston by the way of New York. It consists in lifting the hat from the head and then suddenly thrusting it straight out before you at arm's length. On Broadway no other style of salutation is recognized in good form, but in the crowded and narrow streets of Boston it is most difficult of achievement. It is not unusual for a man who attempts it not only to smash his hat, but to waste ten minutes in apologizing to the people who were too near him when he executed the salute. It has been done with such a jerk to be effective that one state a good chance of giving the person in front of him a notion that he has been sandbagged, and it is difficult to explain away an impression like that.

It is felt by the swells that, much as they would like to adopt the fashion, it is hardly practicable in Boston, unless the city government passes an ordinance obliging pedestrians to keep a certain distance apart in the streets, as cars are supposed to do.—Boston Journal.

A Modest Maid.
Her Father—Mr. Budd appears to be an amiable sort of chap—he has quite a large interest in his father's old firm.
She—(blushing)—I think I can discount the firm, papa, as far as interest goes.
Rev. Mackwell and Ellen Terry.
Editor World: Permit me to enter my protest against a cruel and unjust remark made by the Rev. W. J. Barkwell last Sunday in his discourse re theatre.
Miss Ellen Terry, who the rev. gentleman says, is morally destroyed, a lady upon whom, I believe, the breath of scandal has never rested, who is honored and respected throughout the world, and who is also a welcome guest to the house of the elite of London; a lady who has devoted her life to purifying and elevating the stage. It must be extremely distasteful to a large portion of our "intelligent" citizens to read such remarks as I have referred to. As to what the rev. gentleman may think of the theatre is none of my business, but when he goes out of his way to maliciously malign the character of such ladies as Miss Ellen Terry he makes the same remark in London, Eng., the house of the lady, he would most likely be presented with a coat of feathers.
J. D. Young.
It is only necessary to read the testimonials to be convinced that Holloway's Corn Cure is an equalled for the removal of corns, warts, etc. It is a complete extirpator.
