

CHAPTER XXX.	PAGE
War with Hormuzân, the Satrap of Ahwâz.—His conquest and conversion,	128
CHAPTER XXXI.
Sa'ad suspended from the command.—A Persian army assembled at Nehâvend.—Council at the mosque of Medina.—Battle of Nehâvend,	129
CHAPTER XXXII.
Capture of Hamadân; of Reh.—Subjugation of Tabaristan; of Azerbijân.—Campaign among the Caucasian mountains,	131
CHAPTER XXXIII.
The Caliph Omar assassinated by a fire-worshipper.—His character.—Othman elected Caliph,	133
CHAPTER XXXIV.
Conclusion of the Persian conquest.—Flight and death of Yezdegird,	134
CHAPTER XXXV.
Amru displaced from the government of Egypt.—Revolt of the inhabitants.—Alexandria retaken by the Imperialists.—Amru reinstated in command.—Retakes Alexandria, and tranquillizes Egypt.—Is again displaced.—Abdallah Ibn Saad invades the north of Africa,	136
CHAPTER XXXVI.
Moawyah, Emir of Syria.—His naval victories.—Othman loses the prophet's ring.—Suppresses erroneous copies of the Koran.—Conspiracies against him.—His death,	138
CHAPTER XXXVII.
Candidates for the Caliph.—Inauguration of Ali, fourth Caliph.—He undertakes measures of reform.—Their consequences.—Conspiracy of Ayesha.—She gets possession of Bassora,	140
CHAPTER XXXVIII.
Ali defeats the rebels under Ayesha.—His treatment of her,	143
CHAPTER XXXIX.
Battles between Ali and Moawyah.—Their claims to the Caliphate left to arbitration; the result.—Decline of the power of Ali.—Loss of Egypt,	145
CHAPTER XL.
Preparations of Ali for the invasion of Syria.—His assassination,	147
CHAPTER XLI.
Succession of Hassan, fifth Caliph.—He abdicates in favor of Moawyah,	148
CHAPTER XLII.
Reign of Moawyah I., sixth Caliph.—Account of his illegitimate brother Zeyad.—Death of Amru,	149
CHAPTER XLIII.
Siege of Constantinople.—Truce with the emperor.—Murder of Hassan.—Death of Ayesha,	151
CHAPTER XLIV.
Moslem conquests in Northern Africa.—Achievements of Aqbal; his death,	152

CHAPTER XLV.
Moawyah names his successor.—His last acts and death.—Traits of his character,	153
CHAPTER XLVI.
Succession of Yezid, seventh Caliph.—Fate of Husein, the son of Ali,	154
CHAPTER XLVII.
Insurrection of Abdallah Ibn Zobeir.—Medina taken and sacked.—Mecca besieged.—Death of Yezid,	155
CHAPTER XLVIII.
Inauguration of Moawyah II., eighth Caliph.—His abdication and death.—Merwan Ibn Hakem and Abdallah Ibn Zobeir, rival Caliphs.—Civil wars in Syria,	156
CHAPTER XLIX.
State of affairs in Khorassan.—Conspiracy at Cufa.—Faction of the Penitents; their fortunes.—Death of the Caliph Merwan,	157
CHAPTER L.
Inauguration of Abd'almâlec, the eleventh Caliph.—Story of Al Moktâr, the Avenger,	158
CHAPTER LI.
Musab Ibn Zobeir takes possession of Haleb.—Usurpation of Amru Ibn Saad; his death.—Expedition of Abd'almâlec against Musab.—The result.—Omens; their effect upon Abd'almâlec.—Exploits of Al Mohâddec,	159
CHAPTER LII.
Abd'almâlec makes war upon his rival Caliph.—Mecca.—Siege of the sacred city.—Death of Abdallah.—Demolition and reconstruction of the Caaba,	160
CHAPTER LIII.
Administration of Al Hejagi as emir of Babylon,	161
CHAPTER LIV.
Renunciation of tribute to the emperor.—Battles in Northern Africa.—The prophet queen Cahina; her achievements and fate,	162
CHAPTER LV.
Musa Ibn Nosseyr made emir of Northern Africa.—His campaigns against the Berbers,	163
CHAPTER LVI.
Naval enterprises of Musa.—Cruisings of his son Abdolola.—Death of Abu'almâlec,	164
CHAPTER LVII.
Inauguration of Waleed, twelfth Caliph.—Revival of the arts under his reign.—His taste for architecture.—Erection of mosques.—Conquests of his generals,	165
CHAPTER LVIII.
Further triumphs of Musa Ibn Nosseyr.—Naval enterprises.—Descents in Sicily, Sardinia and Mallorca.—Invasion of Tingitania.—Projects for the invasion of Spain.—Conclusion,	167